FRANK GETS ANOTHER CHANCE

Jury Disagrees in Whitney Will Case

AMERICAN REPLY NOT AN ULTIMATUM

JURYMEN SPLIT ON INFLUENCE

After being out twenty-two hours and forty-five minutes, with one juror so sick a doctor was called at night, the jury in the $230,000 Whitney will contest reported a disagreement at 10 o'clock today. The jury split on the question of undue influence.

The jury agreed that the will was properly drawn and that the testator, Theodore D. Whitney, the Boston merchant, was of sound mind.

But they could not agree on the third issue raised by Mrs. Annie I. Whitney, the widow, who contested the will, namely—whether or not undue influence had been exercised on Whitney by Mrs. Amy H. Barker, a Brookline widow, to whom Whitney willed nearly one-fourth of his estate outright, with another fourth falling to her upon Mrs. Whitney's death.

Judge Fox erased the jury for the day, with words of appreciation for their hardships.

ONE JURY TAKEN ILL.

The word "hardships" had particular significance in this case, because Juror No. 1, Joseph P. Kramer of Dorchester, became so ill in the jury room last night, while he and his fellow jurors were debating the issues, that a court officer was sent for a physician. Treatment was given Kramer, who was able to continue with his companions through the night and to come in with them at 10 o'clock this morning.

As the case stands now, the will is available for probate unless a new contest is instituted by the widow of the testator.

If the will is allowed Mrs. Whitney gets $50,000 outright and one-half of the balance of the estate in trust.

One-fourth of the balance goes direct to Mrs. Carrie W. Myrick, Whitney's sister, and the other fourth direct to Mrs. Barker. Upon Mrs. Whitney's death her share in trust is to be divided between Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Myrick.

QUICKLY 23 HOURS.

The still case went to the jury at 11:15 o'clock yesterday morning. Before the day was over it was apparent that the question whether Mrs. Barker had undue influence over Whitney was the one that troubled the jury most.

At 4:15, after being out five hours, the jury came in for instructions. Judge Fox was asked:

"For how long a period may we infer that undue influence was used, or

14 SAVED, 2 BURNED IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, June 10.—Two men were badly burned and fourteen old men were carried down ladders to safety when the Salvation Army's "Industrial Home" at No. 55 Crescent street burned to the ground at dawn today.

Superintendent James Fales and Arthur Kenyon, sleeping on the ground floor, had to crawl to safety through the kitchen where the fire started, and were burned about the face, head, hands and legs. They were taken to the Brockton Hospital.

The fourteen men rescued, all over fifty, were sleeping on the second floor. Heroic work was necessary to bring them to safety. Sergeant Daniel T. Guerin of the police made four trips into the burning building and carried out four men himself.

Hats and matches are blamed for the fire. Captain S. J. Willer of the army placed the loss at $16,000. The home was a two-story wooden building, without fire escapes.

Cushings Both Held in Lynn Death Case

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin B. Cushing, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of George Brown, waived examination today before Judge Lummus in the Lynn court. Cushing was held in $10,000 and his wife $5,000. Ralph W. McPherson, fifteen-year-old son of Mrs. Cushing by her first husband, was held in $100 as a witness. Deputy Chief of Police David G. Bartlett furnished surety for the boy. Brown was found dead in bed at No. 1029 Washington street, Lynn, Tuesday. There was a wound in his head.

Milk and Vinegar Dealers Are Fined

In the East Boston Court today Judge Barnes disposed of a batch of milk and vinegar complaints made by Dr. James O. Jordan, chief of the city milk inspection department. Heyman Heinstein, Webster street, East Boston, was fined $10 for having milk below standard; Giuseppina Ciarol, Webster street, East Boston, fined $10 for milk below standard; Alden Bros., Tremont street, Roxbury, charged with having milk below standard, continued till June 18; Fernando Santatio, Webster street, adulterated cider vinegar, fined $10; Gabriel Abbruzzies, Lexington street, vinegar below standard, fined $10.

"Some Fighting" Says Willard

When John L. Sullivan whipped the then fistic champion, Paddy Ryan, in 1882, it took only eleven minutes to do it.

Jess Willard, the new champion, says, however, that there was enough fighting in that time to make twenty fights today.

In the fourth chapter of his autobiography in the American tomorrow Willard shows why boxing as it is conducted today is more useful than the knockdown and drag out methods of thirty years ago.

He says the BETTER a boy can fight the LESS he wants to fight.

Germans Sink Liner Seized by British

LONDON, June 10—The steamship Erna Boldt has been sunk in the North Sea by a German submarine. Her crew was landed at Harwich today.

The Erna Boldt is listed in Lloyds Marine Register as a vessel of German nationality. She is a ship of 1,731 tons. It is likely that this was one of the German merchant ships seized by the British at the outbreak of the war and is now being used by them under her old name.

Canada to Send 35,000 More Men

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 9—The department of militia gave out information today that an additional 35,000 Canadian soldiers are to be sent to France at once, including 27 regiments of infantry and six batteries of artillery. This will give the Dominion a total fighting force of 150,000 men. Recruiting opened briskly this morning.

Five Drown as Auto Plunges Into River

OUTLOOK, Sask., June 10—The bodies of J. P. Thompson, his wife, Mrs. Herbert Coleman of Toronto, Mrs. Thompson's sister, and the two Thompson children, aged eight and nine years, were recovered today from the Saskatchewan river. The five were drowned last night when Thomson drove his automobile into the river.

Chicago Carmen to Strike Saturday

CHICAGO, June 10—A strike of 11,000 street car conductors and motormen employed by the Chicago surface lines will go into effect at 4 o'clock Saturday morning, unless some unforeseen action is taken by the company or officers of the carmen's union. This announcement was made without qualification today by the Chicago local of the street car employes' union.

DENIES U. S. CLAIM ON THE FRYE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 10—Germany, in its second reply to American demands in connection with the sinking of the American sailing ship William P. Frye, received at the State Department today, denies that destruction of the Frye constitutes a violation of the treaties between the United States and Prussia, and insists that the cause go to a prize court.

The United States proposed that the matter should be settled by diplomatic negotiations and not by a prize court. The German Foreign Office, however promises to pay proper indemnity. The text of the German reply follows:

The German government cannot admit that, as the American government assumes, the destruction of the sailing vessel mentioned constitutes violation of the treaties concluded between Prussia and the United States of an earlier date and now applicable to the relations between the German empire and the United States, or of the American rights derived therefrom. For this treaties did not have the intention of depriving one of the contracting parties engaged in war of the right of stopping the supply of contraband to his enemy when he recognizes the supply of such as detrimental to his own interest.

On the contrary, Article 13 of the Prussian-American treaty of July 11, 1799, expressly reserves to the party at war the right to stop the carrying of contraband and to detain the contraband. It follows then that if it cannot be accomplished to stop other way the stopping of the supply and in the extreme case be effected by the destruction of the contraband and of the ship carrying it.

SUBJECT TO PRIZE COURT.

As a matter of course the confiscation of the party at war to pay compensation to the parties interested, of the neutral contraband party, remains in force whatever the manner of stopping the supply.

According to general principles

GOVERNOR WILL HEAR APPEAL

ATLANTA, Ga., June 10—Governor Slaton today set the hearing of the petition for a commutation of the death sentence of Leo M. Frank for 9 o'clock next Saturday morning.

Frank's counsel, Harry Alexander and William M Howard and Solicitor-General Hugh M. Dorsey appeared before Governor Slaton today to attempt for the final hearing of the Frank petition.

When both sides had presented documents setting out their position Frank's attorneys announced that they were prepared to proceed at once with the arguments. They requested that there be no delay.

Frank, in his cell, stated that he believed even yet that his life would be spared.

"I have the confidence of an innocent conscience," said Frank. "Soon I think I can reconcile myself to believe that the authorities will know a man not only innocent, but an absolutely innocent."

At Frank's request, very few people were allowed to see him. Many called at the jail, but were refused admission.

LONDON, June 10—The representative in London of the Vanderbilt family declared this afternoon that he had received word from Queenstown that a mistake had been made in the identification of a body washed ashore on the coast of County Clare, Ireland, which was supposed to be that of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who lost his life when the Lusitania was sunk on May 7.

An Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Queenstown earlier in the day was stated positively that Mr. Vanderbilt's body had been washed ashore at Point Doolin, nearly 100 miles from the spot where the boat went down.

Americans Arrive at Rome from Germany

By International News Service.

BERLIN, June 10—Many Americans have arrived here from Germany to the past forty-eight hours, fearing a break between that nation and the United States.

BRYAN TO SPEAK AGAINST WILSON

WASHINGTON, June 10—(Bulletin)—The United States note to Germany is not an ultimatum, it was said at the State Department this afternoon. The note gives Germany ample opportunity for discussion in reply, and, therefore, it was said that the American note fell far short of a document which could be considered as meaning war.

By JUSTIN McGRATH,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The new Wilson note to Germany, couched in much more friendly language than the first, will reach Berlin today.

It became known today that ex Secretary of State Bryan will make a speech making tour to prove that he is right and the President wrong on the two points on which they differed regarding the language of this document and which led to Mr. Bryan's resignation.

In the statement which Mr. Bryan issued explaining the differences between him and the President which led to his resignation he made both at the beginning and the end of it friendly and complimentary allusions to the President.

BRYAN TO CHALLENGE WILSON

Ex-Secretary Now Plans Campaign on Stump to Put Peace Views Before Country.

But despite Mr. Bryan's assurances and despite the affectionate parting between the two men—the sincerity of which on the part of both few question—the prediction is being generally made in Washington today by men of all shades of political opinions, that within a few months Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan in all likelihood will be at danger points politically.

RADICAL DIFFERENCES.

The general view is that such must be the inevitable result of the carrying out of the program which Mr. Bryan has laid out for himself.

Mr. Bryan's statement of the reasons for his resignation showed that the differences between him and the President over the policy with which the President intends to pursue with respect to the issue between Germany and the United States are more radical than had been supposed.

The differences between them are not merely a matter of degree, they are fundamental.

It has been stated in these dispatches that Mr. Bryan disagreed with the President over the length to which he should go in complaining of Germany's warfare, and that Mr. Bryan also favored the sending of another protest to Great Britain at the same time the new note to Germany was sent.

In his statement explaining his resignation Mr. Bryan does not refer to his advocacy of a further protest to Great Britain.

NEW NOTE TO BRITAIN.

Doubtless he did not do so because the President has not as yet mentioned the sending of such a note. Mr. Bryan probably felt a reference to the fact that he had written such a note and urged the sending of it might be taken as a violation of the State Department confidence.

There is no question that a new note to Great Britain has been framed and there is the highest authority for the statement that it has now been decided to forward it, although the time is not disclosed.

The two contentions of Mr. Bryan in which the President and he could not agree were in brief:

First — that the Lusitania case should be investigated by an International Commission.

Second—advisability of warning to all Americans to keep off of belligerent vessels or with cargoes of ammunition.

The fact that Mr. Bryan insisted on arbitrating the Lusitania case was in the nature of a surprise. For he had thought he had gone that far.

His second proposal is but another way of stating that he thought the

Wilson Had No Copy In Advance

WASHINGTON, June 10.—President Wilson did not see Mr. Bryan's statement before it was given out, but knew of the two cardinal points upon which it dwelt. Mr. Bryan and the President discussed them at their farewell talk without altering their respective opinions.

Will Ask Nation to Judge Between Him and the President on German Note.

President meant not to demand of Germany the absolute cessation of submarine warfare against merchant vessels.

WILL SUPPORT WILSON.

In the last paragraph of his statement Mr. Bryan announced that the declaration of his peace principles is to be followed up by pointed advocacy. He says:

"As a private citizen I am free to urge such these propositions and to call public attention to the reasons upon which the hope of securing such an agreement rests, and I shall not hesitate to support the President in employing these remedies if in the future it seems consistent with his high duty to favor them."

The foregoing comment quite generally made in Washington today on the announcement of Mr. Bryan's resignation, is to the effect that Mr. Bryan intends to embarrass the President by opposing him. There is a great interest here in speculations as to the kind of opposition Mr. Bryan will start with and how he starts out on his propaganda tours.

Mr. Bryan said today he had no plans nor definite plans for his speech-making. He will be free to speak as he chooses in addition to several weeks.

PEACE DEPENDS ON REPLY.

It is possible by that time the issue between the United States and Germany will be settled or in a fair way toward settlement.

Information should come from the President's diplomatic representatives, the scope of which opinion might die down to an extent which would still the sails of Mr. Bryan's peace craft.

On the other hand, if there should be a break between the United States and Germany as the result of the note which the President sent today, Mr. Bryan might find himself weather throughout his presidential journeyings.

Partisans of the President undoubtedly would make trouble for him and a tempest in which fighting would rage, particularly from Mr. Bryan's headquarters and the White House would soon be raging.

There is also in the general opinion here as to the probabilities that, in the event of a break with Germany the Democratic party, as well as international peace, is thought to be bound up in the fate of the treaties which Germany will make to the United States.

Mr. Bryan, on leaving the White House, appeared to be in rare good humor. His action as secretary of State, with the President insisting on changing the notes on foreign policy and at the same time per mitting publicity of the fact that he was taking away the big business of the Department of State, made Mr. Bryan's position a unique one.

It has been apparent for some time that he felt deeply his qualification in which he was subjected.

He seemed more cheerful and more like the old Bryan today.

WILSON'S NEW NOTE TO GERMANY INSISTS ON NEUTRAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The new United States note to Germany reiterates the demands for reparation for the loss of American lives in the sinking of the Lusitania and sets forth clearly the earnest desire of the American government that Germany modify her early adherence to the principles of international law—that neutrals be permitted to travel on unarmed ships without being subject to the dangers of submarine warfare.

It is couched in much more friendly terms than it was believed would be used when first satisfactory answer to the American note of May 13 arrived from Germany.

The note stand unalterably, it was state, on the principle that the United States at this stage in its history cannot afford to surrender any of its rights, that the American people fought in 1812 for their rights on the high seas, and cannot sacrifice those rights now, the realization of the full and growth to a position of command as a world Power.

High officials generally held the view that Mr. Bryan's opposing statement constituted a virtual surrender of American rights, guaranteed not only by international law, but by specific treaties between the United States and Germany.

Mr. Bryan's suggestion that Americans should not take passage on American ships carrying ammunition was in direct conflict, it was pointed out, with the treaty of 1828 between Prussia and the United States, wherein either party in time of war is given the right to free access to belligerent ports for commerce in arms and ammunition and other contraband.

Moreover, the right of an American citizen to sail on an unarmed and unresisting merchant ship of any nationality in time of war is held by the President and his advisers to be an inalienable privilege founded on the international law of centuries.

The President's view, as expressed in the note, is understood to be that a new weapon of offence in warfare can be introduced only if it is made to conform with the generally established rules of international law existing.

GERMANY DENIES U. S. FRYE CLAIM

of international law, any exercise of the right of control over the cargo of a neutral ship is subject to decision of the prize court, even though such right may be restricted by special treaties.

At the beginning of the present war Germany, pursuant to these principles, established by law prize jurisdiction for cases of the kind under consideration. The case of the William P. Frye is likewise subject to the German prize jurisdiction, for the Prussian-American treaties mentioned contained no stipulation as to how the amount of the compensation provided by article 13 of the treaty cited is to be fixed.

The German government therefore complies with its treaty obligations to a full extent when the prize courts instituted by it, in accordance with international law, proceed in pursuant of the treaty stipulations and thus award the Americans interested an equitable indemnity.

They would, therefore, be no foundation for a claim of the American government that the prize court should not grant indemnity in accordance with the treaty; in such event, however, the German government would not hesitate to arrange for equitable indemnity notwithstanding.

MATTER OF INDEMNITY.

For the rest, prize proceedings of the case of the Frye are indispensable apart from the American claims, for the reason that other claims of the neutral and enemy interested parties are to be considered in the matter.

As we stated in the note of April 4 last, the prize court should have to decide the questions whether the destruction of a ship and cargo was legal, whether and under what conditions the property rank was liable to confiscation and to whom and in what amount indemnity is to be paid provided application therefor is received.

Since the decision of the prize court must first be awaited before any further position is taken by the German Government, the simplest way for the American interested parties to settle their claims would be to enter them in the competent records in accordance with the provisions of the German code of prize proceedings.

The note was dispatched by Ambassador Gerard bearing the German foreign office date of June 7. The American note to which it is an answer was dated April 30.

BRYAN MAY RUN AS PROHIBITIONIST

NEW YORK, June 10.—Democratic leaders suggest that Bryan may run for President on the Prohibition ticket, dispite a dispatch from Los Angeles, quoting Bryan's son, William Jennings, Jr., that "Father has been contemplating resigning from the Cabinet for a long time." The junior Mr. Bryan is Assistant United States Attorney, located at Tacoma.

"I think father did right in leaving the Cabinet," he added, "as he had taken the stand for the prevention of war with Germany, and naturally disagreed with the strong note sent to Berlin. It was against his principles, and it was because he had faith in his opinions that he resigned.

"I don't believe father will be a candidate for President in 1916. From all I have learned from him, he does not even consider such a thing. I know, however, that he will continue to be a Democrat and will support Mr. Wilson as long as he is in office."

That Bryan may run as a Prohibitionist is nevertheless argued by some of the shrewdest Democratic politicians in the country.

Bryan Planning Peace Campaign

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Former Secretary of State Bryan is reported to have plans under way for an anti-war propaganda, by which he would unite the labor forces of America against war.

This declaration is made by close friends of the former Secretary. From the same source comes the declaration that Mr. Bryan had been made the victim of a conspiracy on the part of the President and some of his advisers to get rid of him.

The chief movers in this plot—according to the Bryanites—are Secretaries McAdoo, Garrison, Lane and Presidential Secretary Tumulty, who are represented to have been "jealous of Mr. Bryan's influence and popularity."

The theory that it is Bryan's purpose to make the star features of his future activities the slogan, "No war for American" and country-wide prohibition is based upon his declarations to personal friends.

BOYS TELL HOW BRITISH LURED MANY AMERICANS INTO ARMY

American boys and men who returned today on the Leyland liner Bohemian and others who landed yesterday on the liner Colonial furnished direct testimony of the methods employed by British recruiting officers to coax and coerce Americans to join the English army.

They allege that the British officers came aboard the ships as soon as they docked and not only offered them money in many instances, but suggested that they take false oath as to their ages and nationality. All agreed that the recruiting officers advised them to swear they were Canadians.

The stories of the first arrivals from abroad tell how successful the British army officials have been in getting Americans, many of them under age, to enlist for active service, and how many were hurried to the front.

MANY INDUCED TO JOIN.

Charles F. Magee of No. 824 Washington street, Boston, who returned on the Bohemian, said that out of 107 boilers who sailed from Boston many were induced to join the British army. Magee said:

"We had scarcely landed when British recruiting sergeants came aboard and addressed us. Most of the 107 boilers enlisted. Although I am over fifty, the Britishers wanted me to enlist. I laughed and told them my age, and they said I could easily swear I was younger. Then I told them I was an American, and they said that didn't make any difference, that I could say I came from Canada.

"I didn't fall for their arguments on coaxing. I told them I was too old a bird to be shared by such guff and that if the United States needed me I'd fight, but not for a foreign country and they dropped me as a hopeless case."

Arthur Barnes, 20, of No. 42 Columbus avenue, Pawtucket, R. I., said:

"Recruiting sergeants came among us. One offered me five shillings if I would enlist, and another offered to divide his bonus money with me, but I listened and told them I didn't go there to do any fighting."

DONOVAN'S STORY.

Leo F. Donovan, seventeen, of No. 57 Shore Drive, Winthrop, and Arthur J. Cotter, eighteen, of No. 378 Siffrin street, Winthrop, told how many of the hostlers who sailed with them on the Colonial were induced to enlist in the army and they told also how the English liner flew the Stars and Stripes while passing through the war zone to conceal its identity and deceive the German submarines.

The display of Old Glory by the liner Colonial is said to be the first instance since President Wilson sent the note of protest to Germany about the sinking of the Lusitania.

Young Donovan, who recently was employed as an office boy in the AMERICAN editorial room and later as a chauffeur, said the American boys on board resented the use of the American colors on the British ship and conspired to haul it down at night, but that two guards prevented their plan. Here are the signed stories of Donovan and Cotter:

By LEO F. DONOVAN.

The first recruiting officer we saw was a corporal who came aboard the Colonian when we touched Avonmouth. He told us of the wonderful opportunities for young men in the English army, and promised me a bonus of three pounds if I would enlist.

I didn't enlist, but twenty-seven of the boys went away with him. I heard afterward they enlisted at Bristol. All but three or four were Americans.

When we arrived in London we thought we would look around a bit. At the docks we met another recruiting officer who wanted us to enlist. He offered us a bob a day if we would join the army.

On the streets there were a lot of girls trying to "pick us up" as we would call it over here. All the girls would say: "Why don't you join the army." "You're afraid to fight," or call us "Yankee cowards."

USED U. S. FLAG.

Coming back on the Colonian when off the Chalk Cliffs a British torpedo boat hailed us and told the captain to fly a neutral flag or no flag at all.

The captain rug up the American flag and it stayed up until we were out of the war zone. We tried to take it down, because it wasn't flying for us, but we didn't get a chance.

The food was awful and we did not see why they should fly our flag. My mother wouldn't give such food to the pigs.

By ARTHUR P. COTTER.

We did not think anything about recruiting until an officer boarded the Colonian at Avonmouth. He offered all us boys fifteen dollars bonus if we would enlist. I didn't, but twenty-seven left the ship with Him and I suppose they enlisted. They were nearly all Americans.

At London a recruiting officer offered us six shillings a day if we would enlist in the army. I told him I was an American, but he said: "That's all right. You are a Canadian."

Every where we went we were spoken to by recruiting officer who told us we could enlist easy as we you are Canadians. Fe—the American stuff," they said.

There were lots of girls on the street. They would take our arms and say: "Why don't you go into the army? Are you afraid to fight?" and remarks like that.

Fifteen enlisted while we were in London. All Americans I think.

EXPECT UNITED STATES TO SEND BRITAIN A NOTE ON SHIPPING

WASHINGTON, June 10.—That the press a serious issue with Great Britain at the moment when such more serious is being discussed with Germany.

Though the State Department for months has been gathering data on British practices in violation of American rights of trade with neutral countries, the actual sending of a note is not so imminent as to lead to the actual preparation of a communication on this ground. It was learned tonight that responsible officials at the State Department have not yet been informed of the President's decision in this regard.

TO PROTECT COTTON TRADE.

After a full or two days the subject was brought to the attention of the President in the delegation of Southerners who are greatly interested in the cotton trade, particularly as they are having in the cotton trade with Germany and adjacent neutral countries. The President became the delegation of two weeks ago on this subject. It is now declared that the cotton question is coming very serious and that some action by the national government to regain to it is imperative if American rights are to be adequately cared.

RESIGNATION A CALAMITY

By PROF. GEORGE W. KIRCHWEY.

Former Dean of the Law School, Columbia University, New York; editor historical manuscripts for the State of New York; Colonel Roosevelt's nominee for Judge of the Court of Appeals, New York, 1912.

NEW YORK, June 10.—To the Editor of the AMERICAN:

Sir—It seems to me that Mr. Bryan's withdrawal from the Cabinet in the present crisis is little short of a calamity as indicating the triumph of what a morning newspaper has called the "War Party" in the administration at Washington.

As I interpret the expression, it does not mean that the President or any of his partisans are bent on war with Germany. We know, on the contrary, that they are sincerely desirous of keeping the country out of war, if possible. But the triumph of the militant element in the cabinet is a grave misfortune for the nation, and for the President himself.

What we are to expect in Japan is not for us to say. But it is clear that the President will embark on war or descend with ignominy, but the ominous words he uttered upon the sinking of the Lusitania, that "there is such a thing as a nation being too proud to fight," will have to be explained. The notion that our rights can be fulfilled by all—by

COLONEL HOUSE MENTIONED AS POSSIBLE SUCCESSOR TO BRYAN

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Colonel Edward M. House, who has been a close friend of President Wilson since the latter's early political career, was mentioned tonight as a possible successor to William Jennings Bryan as Secretary of State. Colonel House, who is a resident of Texas, arrived in Washington today and will remain a few days as a guest of the President at the White House. He declined to discuss the reports that he would be appointed to succeed Mr. Bryan.

Colonel House's name was mentioned in connection with the vacancy in the State Department before Mr. Bryan's resignation was announced, but the announcement of his departure from the Cabinet was made before Colonel House arrived in Washington.

Colonel House's visit to the White House is the first he has made to Washington since the inauguration of President Wilson. He has been a constant visitor at the White House during the last year, and has been consulted frequently by the President on matters of state. It is known certain that Colonel House was recalled on account of the Bryan

Among the surprises of the European war has been the way in which the French have met the German secret guns. Although the Germans put into the field immense new guns, the existence of which had not been previously known, the French soon counteracted their work with other secret types, one of which is shown here, mounted in the Argonne district.

MONFALCONE IS TAKEN BY ITALY

By BRINTON DALLAIRE,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, June 10.—The Italian army, maneuvering to attack Trent from the northeast, has defeated an Austrian column near Cortina d'Ampezzo, and is now nearing the Austrian mountain fortress defending Falzarego Pass east of Cortina. The Austrian position at Praikopel has been taken and an Austrian gun and some artillery captured.

The Italians now hold Monfalcone.

Furious fighting is still in progress along the Isonzo River.

The following official statement relative to the operations of the Italian armies of invasion was issued by the War Office today:

FIGHTING ALONG THE ISONZO.

"Our troops meeting Falzarego Pass in a favorable engagement ten kilometers distance from Cortina D'Ampezzo, captured a gun and ammunition from the Austrians at Praikopel.

"Our Austrian position at that point was seized on Tuesday night and we made 100 prisoners there.

"Along the Isonzo front fighting still rages, our batteries shelling the positions which the Austrians still retain around Monte Nero. We have taken an important position there which the enemy evacuated. The Austrians left 100 dead behind and sixty wounded. Near Caporetto sixty Austrians deserted their army and came into our camp. The Austrian losses have been heavy.

"Throughout Monday and Tuesday we continued our operations designed to throw back the Austrians from the mountain section they held on the right bank of the Isonzo, and to establish strong bridgeheads.

"The enemy has been offering obstinate resistance, being favored by conditions of ground which also make it difficult to penetrate the line owing to broken bridges and land roads resulting from extensive floods along the lower course of the Isonzo.

"Our troops everywhere have fought with the greatest dash and tenacity. Their valor being rewarded by the character of important positions.

TAKE IMPORTANT HEIGHTS.

"We have captured Monfalcone.

"In the mountainous region of Monte Nero (west and northwest of Tolmein) we took an important height after the enemy had been driven off by our fire. At other points along the Isonzo valley we took more than 500 prisoners.

"The main Austrian army is now only sixteen miles from Trieste."

HINT HUNGARY MAY ABANDON AUSTRIA

Boston American and London Telegraph Exclusive cable Service.

ROME, June 10.—A great impression has been caused by an article in the Rome Tribuna dealing with the contingency of a separate peace by Hungary, which would abandon Austria, and also by Turkey.

In Hungary the currents are favorable for the Allies, says the Austrian. In this case the new allies would abandon negotiations with Roumania to Hungary would give Transylvania and part of the Austrian position there which the enemy evacuated. The Austrians left 100 dead behind and sixty wounded. Near Caporetto sixty Austrians deserted their army and came into our camp. The Austrian losses have been heavy.

Throughout Monday and Tuesday we continued our operations designed to throw back the Austrians from the mountain section they held on the right bank of the Isonzo, and to establish strong bridgeheads.

Germans Sink 4 More Trawlers

LONDON, June 10.—German submarine warfare in British waters has resulted in the destruction of four more trawlers, according to reports received up to noon. All were sunk in the North Sea and all the boats hailed from Grimsby. The victims were the Velocity, the Nottingham, the Vanista and the Castor.

Germany is evidently trying to control England's supply of fish by keeping up the destruction of the fishing fleet in the North Sea.

The Velocity was sunk by five shots from a gun mounted upon the submarine. Her crew drifted for fifty-two hours in an open boat before being picked up by the trawler May Fly.

GERMAN NAVAL LOSSES IN BALTIC

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 10.—A German torpedo boat, a transport and another steamship have been destroyed by the Russians in the Baltic, and a torpedo boat badly damaged, it was officially announced today. The announcement follows:

"It is confirmed that a German torpedo boat and a transport were destroyed by one of our submarines off Windau on June 3. Another torpedo boat was damaged. An armed steamship was blown up by a mine.

COPENHAGEN, June 10.—Two German submarines are reported to have been badly damaged by the Russians in the Baltic Sea.

BERLIN, June 10.—The German admiralty issued a statement today denying the official report issued in Petrograd on Monday by the Russian ministry of marine, in which it was claimed that three German ships had been sunk in the Baltic. It was admitted, however, that the Germans had a collier

Suspect German Spy Burned Ambulances

By International News Service.

LONDON, June 9.—One hundred Red Cross ambulances and 200 motor vans which were about to be delivered to the War Office were destroyed by a mysterious fire in a factory at York, Royal today. The loss of $500,000 Scotland Yard believes the fire was set by a German spy.

Turk Gunboat Sunk, Transport Is Taken

LONDON, June 10.—The Turkish gunboat Marmaris has been sunk and the Turkish transport Nagara has been captured, according to an official British statement. The actions took place in the Persian gulf region.

The Marmaris displaced 425 tons and carried a complement of 68 men. She was built at Le Creusot, France, in 1897.

REPORT PEOPLE OF GORIZIA ARE ORDERED TO EVACUATE CITY

By International News Service.

VIENNA, June 10.—While optimistic reports continue to come in from the eastern theatre of war, advices from the southwestern theatre are not so rosy. The population of Gorizia is said to have been ordered by the authorities to evacuate the city. It is admitted that the Italians are making progress along the Isonzo river. Heavy guns are being moved to Fiume, where the Austrian fortifications are being strengthened.

SHEPARD NORWELL COMPANY

GERMANY STIRRED BY BRYAN'S ABRUPT QUITTING OF CABINET

BERLIN, June 10.—(Via The Hague)—Secretary Bryan's resignation was the day's sensation here. It was heavily headed in the afternoon papers, which printed columns of editorials and reviews of Mr. Bryan's career. The German have always regarded him as largely responsible for the alleged pro-British policy at Washington.

The Lokal Anzeiger urges a suspension of judgment until the facts are known and scouts the Reuter report that the Cabinet break was caused by Bryan's greater inclination for a peaceful compromise of the Lusitania case. It says:

"To be sure, by reason of his pacifist views and fondness for arbitration, Mr. Bryan may be justly regarded as the exponent of the softer answer to Germany, but nevertheless we are inclined to doubt whether Bryan represented a more pacifist policy only because of his love for Germany. There were personal bonds that chained him to England.

"It concludes by expressing the belief that the difficulty between Mr. Wilson and Bryan was over the means rather than the end.

The Vossische Zeitung says in part:

"The moment of the resignation lends some significance to it. Of course, it is only too apparent (and everybody in America knew it long ago), that in a time which demands so much expert knowledge of diplomats as it imposes responsibilities on them, a man like Bryan had to go from the post of directing foreign affairs.

REASON FOR CLASH.

"It was natural that, as the world war made itself more and more felt in America, President Wilson should take the matters of foreign affairs into his own hands. The President was considered to be the author of the various American notes, harsh ones to Germany, weak ones to England. Bryan's resignation indicates serious difference with the President over the note to be sent to Germany and presumably to England.

"Moreover, the postponement of the note to Germany, the contents of which, probably diminished by Bryan, have already been printed in the English papers, pointed to differences at Washington.

"What does one go so far in assuming that the Secretary Wilson clashed with Bryan because Wilson did not see in the Lusitania sinking a single incident, but saw in it the whole question of submarine warfare and retaliation by reprisal.

"The Berliner Tageblatt adopts a sarcastic tone, saying: 'After the fall of Secretary Bryan, Americans will continue to serve publicly for people, but will also continue to dispatch arms and ammunitions to our enemies, and thus will see that they may to prolong the war.

"In this respect there will be no change at all."

DOMESTIC EFFECT.

This newspaper expresses the opinion that the resignation of Mr. Bryan will have more effect upon the domestic politics of America than upon her foreign policy. It attributes Mr. Bryan's resignations to undue zeal to him by German-Americans, asking him to leave the cabinet in the "hour of the country."

The Berliner Tageblatt says: "It is no longer a secret that the pacifistic views did not meet with approval in those who would have broken off diplomatic relations, although Germany, owing to the Lusitania affair, was undoubtedly not friendly to Germany and offered more unfavorable than President Wilson."

Some of the newspapers adopted a conservative tone, reserving comment until further facts are obtainable from Washington. The Overseas Bureau read which was founded by the German government at the outbreak of the war, says out the following:

"In official circles no belief is attached to reports from British sources that the American rejoinder to the German reply is a sort of ultimatum to Germany."

Britons for Policy of Wilson

LONDON, June 10.—The news of the resignation of Secretary of State Bryan caused a stir here which was exceeded only by that in the United States. Probably no single item of news has caused so much interest in the lobby of Commons. Some comments made by prominent Britons in reply to a request from the International News service follow.

By Lord Sydenham, former Governor of Bombay.

"Every true friend of America will regret that the President has taken a firm stand against the indiscriminate murder of noncombatants on the high seas. The United States may risk a war which can involve no external danger, but further cause of humanity will gain lastingly."

By Arnold Bennett—While I appreciate Mr. Bryan's motive, I have, and have always had, complete confidence in the President's handling of the situation. I do not think it will entail war or that war is necessary. A solemn diplomatic rupture should suffice if Germany is unrepentant."

By Lord Wearmouth, chairman of the Anglo-American Peace Centenary Commission—Bryan's resignation is a long devotion to the cause of international peace and arbitration. The consequent upon the reluctance of his association with any policy likely to involve the possibility of war, but in no sense implies condonation of the flouting acts of the German government.

By J. L. Garvin, editor Pall Mall Gazette—Mr. Bryan's principles are respected here, as were Lord Morley's. President Wilson is in a serious crisis. Bryan is a great man in a grave hour, with calmness, patience and wisdom, like Washington himself, but no less capable of influencing a resolution to uphold what he thinks vital to American honor and security. It is for him alone, we know, to decide that solemn issue in the silence of his soul.

By Sir Hiram Maxim—Mr. Bryan has done an greater thing, considered calculated to do much harm to the American cause. Nothing could be worse.

By General Sir Alfred Turner—"The President's firmness has evoked the admiration of the whole civilized world struggling to crush a monster which is seeking to restore paganism and to wade through slaughter to a throne and close the gates of pity on mankind. It is a blight and curse but the loss of honor is worse. The President has chosen the better part. All honor to him.

By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle—"This is an American question. It is not for outsiders to interfere."

PARIS COMMENT ON RESIGNATION

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Special Correspondent International News Service.

PARIS, June 10.—Secretary Bryan's resignation was the greatest surprise to all Paris and Europe, yesterday. It caused a tremendous sensation everywhere, but nothing official yet.

Stephen Pichon, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, issued the general sentiment in the following statement made to the press:

"I am not inclined to think a break between the United States and Germany would be to the interest of either country. Germans in most anxious to avoid a rupture and I am not likely to risk the creation of a new factor, which would be hostile under the people of the United States.

"I rather expect that Germany will cease her submarine war to complicate matters. I do not think that the personal effect of Mr. Bryan's resignation is favorable in favor of the Germans.

Opinions are expressed in the Paris newspapers as follows:

La Liberte—Bryan was a dangerous dreamer. The honor of a great country is not to be sacrificed to the ideas of "Yes" or "No." Unfortunately, Mr. Wilson has hitherto been hampered by the influence of Mr. Bryan, whose own theories were dearer to himself than the dignity of his country.

Journal Des Debats—"Mr. Bryan has done us more harm than good, than to think—such a leader of the American nation—is sinister. His resignation clears the situation."

Matin—Mr. Bryan is a pacifist at any price. Fortunately Mr. Wilson has developed a degree of firmness of which he was not believed capable.

Libre Parole—Mr. Bryan's influence in maintaining his ideals, has not let his country profit by it. The President can character is capable of firmness and resolution, and the complications will not be without consequence.

DANIELS AND LANE DECLARE CABINET IS LOYAL TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of the Interior Lane both declare unreservedly that the Cabinet stands loyally back of the President in the support of the new note to Germany on the sinking of the Lusitania.

Secretary Daniels said: "I think the President's note is the note he ought to send, and the country will stand behind him."

Nine members of the Cabinet are agreed that the President's position is right. In declining to sign the note, I believe Secretary Bryan stood by the principles of the administration.

Daniels reiterated his statement that he had not even thought of resigning as Secretary of the Navy.

In New York Secretary Lane said in reply to questions that rumors of further resignations from the President's Cabinet were without the slightest foundation.

"Then that means that with the exception of Mr. Bryan the Cabinet is solidly behind the President in his present policy in the international situation?" he was asked.

"Absolutely," he replied.

Reduce Price of Bread of London

LONDON, June 10.—A reduction of one cent in the price of bread is announced. The price of a four-pound loaf has been 18 cents.

Mention Guthrie for Bryan's Place

PITTSBURGH, June 10.—That George W. Guthrie, Ambassador to Japan and ex-Democratic State chairman, may be asked to succeed Mr. Bryan is a report emanating from circles close to the Pittsburgher. Mr. Guthrie refuses to discuss the report. "I very greatly regret the severance of the most pleasant official relations I have had with Mr. Bryan," was the only comment the Ambassador would make.

FROM WHITMAN TO GIVE TESTIMONIAL

Chas. F. Ransom of 21 Myrtle Ave, Says He Now Has No More Aches or Pains.

Catarrh of the stomach is very frequently a result of catarrh of the head, but it may also follow a disturbance or failure of the digestive functions. Inflammation or disturbance of the stomach is inflamed and becomes coated with mucus, which rises in the throat continually in the effort of the stomach to throw off its noxious burden.

Pilot Juice, the new herbal medicine has always been found effective in toning up the membranous lining and cleaning the entire system of this nauseating mucus. The strongest evidence of its power to heal an irritated membrane, which denotes catarrh, and put one's system back into a healthy state is the statement of people who have used it and been benefited. Following is the signed testimonial of Mr. Chas. F. Ransom, who lives at No. 21 Myrtle avenue, Whitman, a suburb of Boston, Mr. Ransom has lived in Whitman all his life and is a well known lodge man. Mr. Ransom's occupation is that of a Night Watchman. He stated:

"I had been troubled with stomach trouble, dyspepsia and indigestion for many years. After I would eat my food fermented and caused belching and gas. I have tried a great many different remedies for my troubles, but did not seem to get any benefit from them. I was informed by my doctor that I had nervous indigestion and sent for publication that I have only one bottle of Pilot Juice and it has done me more real good than anything I have ever taken yet, for I have not seemed to feel so well or better in health that I have been for a long time. I certainly can recommend Pilot Juice to any of my friends who are having all the trouble I claimed for it. I have no more indigestion.

"There are numerous symptoms of this trouble that Pilot Juice can relieve, but any of the following may need drastic attentions of the liver, constipation, dyspepsia, belching of wind, bad breath, sick headache, coated tongue, pimples, loss of appetite, dizziness, sallow complexion, tired feeling, restlessness, sour stomach or a general run down condition.

The Pilot Juice man is at the Lincoln Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he will meet his friends and explain and produces and explains the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

The sisters were separated when Louise was three and Adeline seven years old. Adeline went to the Little Wanderers' Home in Boston. Louise was brought up by foster parents.

Adeline was later adopted by Mrs. Austin Perkins of Wilmuth, for whom she was named. She grew up in his home. Here she lived until she left to study. Then she came to Lisbon, being the first to find her sister.

The Colonial had the first of its Opera ball Tuesday, when it is reported, without however, any foreshadowing address.

Whether Mirkinoff, as Mrs. Gouraud's physician or not has not a matter of doubt since the settlement last February, accompanied by him, and should there had been a marriage between them, the Louise reports and the reports of a license regularly issued to them.

John McManus of Williams street and Francis Berry, owner of the automobile, were sent to their homes after treatment for slight bruises about the body.

The party was returning from a dance at Dighton Rock Park. All were crowded into the automobile, which is a small touring car and has been used as a jitney bus. The gateman, who has charge of the Bread Cove crossing, leaves at 9 o'clock at night.

WHITNEY JURY OUT 22 HOURS

sent to the jury room for consideration of the case, with a copy of the law that the said [illegible]?

In reply Judge Fox said:

"The question of undue influence relates to the controlling and influencing of the mind at the time the will was made, and to the making of it. The influence may have been brought to bear before that time, but unless it was so effective as to control the mind in the making of the will it is not considerable.

"You may take all the evidence near and remote into consideration in determining it.

"The will could not have been procured by the undue influence of Alice H. Barker unless the mind of Whitney was in such a condition and control at the time he made the will, whether such influence was exerted then or some time before."

SPLIT ON UNDUE INFLUENCE.

When Judge Fox left court for the night he gave instructions that if a verdict should be reached it should be sent to him at his home. This morning.

The Horse arrived at court at the usual time, but the jury was still out. Shortly after 9:30, when the jury had been out more than twenty-two hours, a court officer informed Judge Fox that the jury wished to see him again. His Honor entered court. The jury came in. Juror Brophy rose and said on behalf of his fellows. He dropped into the seat of Juror Brophy and was directed by a court officer to his own seat adjoining.

Foreman Eugene E. Chapman told the judge that the jury had reached a verdict on the questions of sound mind and proper execution of the will, but had not yet agreed on the issue of undue influence.

Judge Fox expressed his regret at the illness of Juror Kramer, and said:

"I leave it to you gentlemen to agree whether it is of avail to argue further over the third issue. If you do not think it is, I will permit you to render a partial verdict."

The jurors went out again to see if they thought it of any use to keep on debating the influence issue. It did not take them long to decide it was no use. At 10 o'clock, in less than a half hour's absence, the jury came in for the last time, to report a disagreement.

Foreman Chapman reported that the jury agreed that the will was properly executed and that Whitney was of sound mind.

But, on the issue of undue influence, Chapman said to the judge: "We cannot agree."

Judge Fox said:

"I fully appreciate your patience and your fidelity and hardships. I am satisfied that you did all you could. I shall excuse you for the rest of the day."

The jurors then left.

Live Wire Makes Mud Puddle Fatal

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., June 19.—Two horses were killed and two men had a narrow escape when the animals stepped into a puddle on Monroe street into which a live wire had dropped. The men, H. Britton and C. F. Bowen, were seated on a lumber wagon and the fact that they were standing on the wood alone saved their lives, as both would otherwise have climbed down into the puddle to see why the horses fell.

Harvard to Dedicate $2,000,000 Widener Library on June 24

The two million dollar Widener Memorial library at Harvard will be dedicated on Commencement Day, Thursday, June 24. The magnificent building was erected by Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia as a memorial to her son, Harry E. Widener, who sank with the Titanic. Young Widener had two loves, Harvard and books, and in his will bequeathed his priceless library to his alma mater. It was his wish for Harvard to have an adequate home for his collection, and his mother carried out the wishes of her son.

The exercises will start at noon. Prominent figures in the dedication will be President Lowell, George P. Winship, Widener librarian; W. C. Lane, college librarian; Mrs. George D. Widener, the donor, and Horace Trumbauer, the architect.

Jap Government Wins as Diet Adjourns

TOKIO, Japan, June 10.—The Diet has adjourned. In the last hour the House defeated a resolution of the opposition for the impeachment of Shigenobu Okuma, president of the House. The resolution charged Mr. Okuma with having made rulings in favor of the supporters of the government and also with having permitted "the worst disorders in the history of Parliament."

Freed of Manslaughter.

A jury in East Cambridge has returned a verdict of "not guilty" in the case of Abraham Silverman, substitute gatetender at the Park street railroad crossing, Somerville, of the Boston & Maine, who was charged with manslaughter.

TRANSPORT TO TAKE REFUGEES

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Major-General Gaillard today cabled the commander of the army transport Beauford at Vera Cruz to stop at Tuxpam on his way back to Galveston and to take on refugees there if he has room on the Beauford for them.

This suggestion was made at the request of Admiral Caperton, commanding the naval squadron at Vera Cruz. Consul-General Shanklin, who is with the special train bringing foreign passengers from Mexico City to Vera Cruz, reported to the State Department from Puebla today that 431 refugees had arrived there. The British consul on the train reported ample rail facilities for all foreigners wishing to leave the capital.

A dispatch from Special Agent Carothers dated at Gomez Palacio, June 7, stated that the battle between Villa and Obregon ordered fiercely "with all the advantage on Villa's side."

"The situation in Mexico City is more acute than anywhere else in the republic," according to our advices," is the report from General Devol, who is acting chairman and general manager of the American Red Cross in San Antonio. "The capital has been put off for some time from all communication with all border points. We have no present means of getting supplies to the city, and we know of no considerable quantity of grain available for relief purposes except this one immense storage."

The grain in question, he said, is the property of a man now living in Washington, a close friend of General Carranza, whose support is necessary to the consummation of the purchase.

MAN ASSAULTED IDENTIFIES 'COP'

Charles L. Kraft of No. 143 Eighth street, who claims he was assaulted by an officer in the South Boston station after being arrested for drunkenness, has identified the officer out of all the patrolmen at the station, it became known today, and has engaged an attorney to prosecute his case.

Kraft came up in the South Boston court Monday and told Judge Logan he had been assaulted, knocked down and left unconscious. Judge Logan directed him to find out the patrolman's name. Kraft promised to do so and said: "I can identify him easily."

The next day Kraft wrote Commissioner O'Meara asking permission to attempt to identify the officer.

The same day, Lieutenant Sanford, who booked Kraft at the station, said: "I know of no assault being committed on the young man after he had reached the station."

Commissioner O'Meara acknowledged Kraft's letter with the following communication:

"Dear Sir—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 7th and to say that the matter concerning which you write will be investigated."

Kraft said today:

"Captain Lee of the station sent a sergeant to take me to the station, and I went and was led into the guard room, where all the men were.

"I picked out the patrolman who knocked me unconscious. They did not tell me his name.

"Captain Lee told the patrolmen he would not allow such incidents in his station."

Graduation Day at Thompson's Island

Graduating exercises were held today at the Farm and Trades School, Thompson's Island, an institution now in its 161st year. The exercises were on the lawn in front of the main building. Parents and friends of the graduates and others interested in the school were taken to the island by special steamer from City Point at 1:30 p. m. Arriving at the island, the Farm and Trades School Band headed the parade up the pier to the lawn. At the beginning and at the close of the exercises the band played. Rev. Samuel C. Bushnell was the speaker and Superintendent Charles H. Bradley presented diplomas to a large class of graduates.

TAKE SARGENT ON BOSTON CHARGE

Gilbert L. Sargent, alias Nash, of Medford clubman and bond salesman who was arrested as he was ashore last Saturday from the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia, on a complaint charging him with fraudulently procuring $26,000 bonds from Lee, Higginson & Co., State detectives, will arrive in Boston late tonight or early tomorrow.

Sargent is in custody of Detective Farrell. He had hopes that his wife, as he expressed it, "would fix things up in Boston so I won't have to go back there." When told that he would have to face prosecution here Sargent was disappointed.

Sargent was one of the best known bond salesmen in Boston for years. He belonged to many clubs and fraternal orders. His arrest in Philadelphia for bond swindling shocked his many friends here. He was sentenced to serve eight years, but through his wife and influential friends secured a pardon after serving but a year in the Philadelphia institution.

Mrs. Sargent and her sixteen-year-old daughter were overjoyed to think he was to have his liberty, but when detective Farrell arrived at the penitentiary gate on the Boston charge they were dumfounded. The charge for which he was sentenced in Philadelphia was passing Barclay, Moore & Co. out of $25,000 on a bad check. The warrant issued on complaint of the Boston bankers had been pigeonholed by the Philadelphia proceedings.

The Philadelphia police say Sargent made false certificate stamps, many of which were found on black checks in his pocket. After his arrest Mrs. Sargent and her daughter were left in straitened circumstances. The daughter became a motion picture actress to help support herself and mother.

Mrs. R. G. Larsen Dies in Dorchester

Elsie G. Larsen, wife of Robert G. Larsen, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, died at her home, No. 175 Glenway street, Dorchester, today. Mrs. Larsen was the daughter of Gertrude Cabot Phelan, formerly of Cambridge. She was married to Mr. Larsen about seven years ago. She was a member of the D. A. R. and of the Professional Women's Club and was a composer of note. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

JURY DISAGREES IN CASE OF MRS. PERCIVAL LOWELL

Miss Maud Birch, at left, and Mrs. Percival Lowell, who was sued by Miss Birch for $10,000 for alleged slander.

The jury considering the $10,000 slander suit of Miss Maud Birch against Mrs. Percival Lowell, wife of Professor Percival Lowell, the wealthy astronomer, reported a disagreement today and was discharged by Judge Raymond.

Miss Birch is a former seamstress of Mrs. Lowell. About two years ago she was arrested on the charge of larceny from her employer, but was acquitted in court.

After a trial replete with sensations, including the repudiation of a signed "confession" by Miss Birch, the case was given to the jury last month yesterday. The jury was out until 7 o'clock last evening, when it was dismissed for the night. This morning the foreman reported the hopeless inability of the jurymen to agree.

During the trial Miss Birch took the stand and testified that the "confession" signed by her was obtained from her by intimidation on the part of Mrs. Lowell and private detectives.

Here is a copy of the disputed "confession":

November 22, 1913.

I hereby confess I stole lace, kid gloves, jabots and other valuables.

(Signed) MAUD BIRCH

Witness: Reta Braley.

On the stand Miss Birch said: "Mrs. Lowell wrote me and asked me to call. Accompanied by my sister, Reta Braley, I was ushered into a big room with a lot of people. One was a private detective, another was a police inspector. Mrs. Lowell said: 'Now, I want you to confess.' I said, 'Confess to what?' She said, 'You stealing my things.' I said, 'I have not stolen anything from you.'

CITY ENGINEER SULLIVAN TELLS OF NEED FOR BETTER STREETS

The finance committee of the City Council will meet tomorrow afternoon to discuss Mayor Curley's order for a $500,000 loan for immediate street improvements. James H. Sullivan, engineer of the paving division of the Public Works Department, will give the committee the details of the proposed improvements.

Seven of the nine members of the Council were shown street conditions in Boston yesterday afternoon by Mayor Curley. Other city officials in the inspection party were Engineer Sullivan, Acting Paving Commissioner O'Hearn, and Clerk of Committees Dever.

The Mayor outlined some of the street work mapped out in his program of street betterments.

ACTION MONDAY EXPECTED.

Next Monday the Council is expected to take final action on the loan order.

Engineer Sullivan today told of some of the needs of streets in the business district in addition to streets torn up by subway work or by the laying of the high pressure service mains.

He said Haymarket square, with a stupendous vehicle traffic, was paved with granite blocks on a gravel base, and said a concrete base was necessary for a permanent street construction. He continued:

"Leading from Haymarket square across Hanover street into Adams square, Washington street is of similar character. There two areas are constantly calling for repairs and keep men constantly employed.

"Leaving Adams square, Dorchester street to State street is another that demands attention. Congress street from Postoffice square to High street needs improvement.

"In the market district where the traffic is heavy and also unprecedented, are badly needed. This is true of Blackstone, Clinton, Central, Cross, Fulton, Mercantile streets, Merchant's Row, Sudbury street, a part of Richmond street and numerous other thoroughfares, which have not at all been affected by any underground construction but which have not been permanently paved.

COMPREHENSIVE SCHEME.

"The aim of the department is to obtain sufficient money to go into that section of the city which calls for this character of street and to confine our efforts to that section and to accomplish something.

"Then as later we progress from year to year, providing on a comprehensive scheme of street improvements from the North station to the South station, and out along the main thoroughfares to all parts of the city —when all this is achieved, Boston will have streets of which it can be proud.

"Then, too, the amount of money required will not be so great, much as the real street construction which is to take many years. Heavy traffic will have been accommodated, and thereafter the work can be confined more or less to the residential districts.

"In facing the present intolerable condition of the streets, we must bear in mind that the city streets were constructed for the passage of the auto and motor trucks they were not constructed for. The motor vehicle has simply been unable to stand up under the traffic demands made upon them. They were not built for this traffic; what is needed is permanent construction."

QUICK ACTION IS DEMANDED BY THE MERCHANTS OF BOSTON

Here are more endorsements of the AMERICAN'S campaign for better streets, by leading business men of the city.

By HORACE BACON,
of the W. & S. Bacon Company.

Boston's streets in their present condition are certainly not in keeping with the dignity and reputation of the city. Good streets will saved for should be Boston's pride.

The streets have been more or less neglected for a number of years. Small holes have appeared in the roadway surfaces, and instead of being attended to, have been allowed to increase in size until in some cases they have made the roadway positively dangerous. My attention was called to one important thoroughfare in the city where actual measurements of a hole showed it to be thirteen inches deep.

In my opinion repairs in cases have been improperly made. Then no filling of streets was put off until very late this year, and the roadways have suffered where proper filling in time would have saved them.

There is talk of making Boston a convention city. The first move in this direction should be improvement of our streets.

By L. SUMMERFIELD, of the Summerfield Company.

I am keenly interested in the AMERICAN'S campaign for better streets for Boston. It is urgently to be hoped that immediate improvements will be made.

The condition of some of our streets is very bad. They should be attended to at once, because it will benefit Boston and its citizens in many ways. It will make the city also all the more attractive for the thousands of tourists who will come here this Summer.

There is no better advertisement for the city than beautiful, well-paved streets. Our beautiful North Shore Drive and the boulevard to Revere Beach are famous all over the United States. But to be compelled to reach the boulevard over the badly paved streets in the downtown district of Boston is a hardship on indeed.

The condition of Commonwealth avenue is no bad between the Public Garden and Brighton avenue that motorists always detour to Beacon street to avoid deep holes and ruts.

Other streets are as bad. Let them all be improved, and at once.

By J. S. BAILEY,
of the J. S. Bailey Company.

Boston's streets are admittedly in deplorable condition. This is particularly noticeable in the downtown district where in many places because of frequent holes and other defects, the streets have become absolutely a menace.

Good streets are a good business investment for the city. They save money not only to the city, but to business men as well. There is the matter of the greater cost to maintain motor trucks and autos and so on in Boston as a result of poor streets.

Also, good streets add to the city's beauty and attractiveness. They make for better health conditions, they add to the comfort of riding and walking. They help business. There is every reason why the city should have better streets. There is no reason why the streets should be permitted to remain in the present lamentably run-down condition.

As the AMERICAN is pointing out, this is not the time for quibbling or delay, but it is the time for action.

This action must be immediate.

CART WRECKED BY BAD PAVEMENT

This ice cart got stuck the other day on Arch street. The hole in the street is covered by barrel and box.

ANTIS BLOOM IN ROSE CONVENTION

SPRINGFIELD, June 10.—Anti-suffragette roses meet one at every corner here. More than 500 representative members of the Massachusetts Anti-suffrage Association are assembled in a convention which is the opening gun in the most vigorous campaign the antis of this State have attempted. They hope to defeat woman suffrage at the election next November.

One of the main purposes of the convention is to bring together anti-suffragettes from all parts of the State, and to solidify and encourage them for the fight of the next few months. The active organizing of campaign plans will begin today.

The reception which formally opened this convention at which Mrs. James M. Codman, president of the association, and several other State leaders, received the delegates, was a bower of roses.

The women at the reception were from all walks of life. Many of them were plainly dressed, representatives from the country districts; some such as Miss Mary Shreve Ames of North Easton, were women of wealth an dposition.

After the tea Mrs. A. J. George of Brookline spoke on "Why We Are Anti-suffragists." She scored suffrage as based on sex antagonism, as neurotic and the result of an age of agnosticism and materialism. She declared, amid applause, that "Anti-suffragists do not want a fair field and favor for all; they desire the privileges accorded them as women."

Dr. Ernest Bernhoum of Harvard termed the "international solidarity of women," which is the watchword of the women's peace party, "moral moonshine." He asserted that there has long been an alliance between suffragists and Mormons, and evoked strenuous applause by the declaration that women are not competent to vote.

CHARGES OF WHIPPING BOY IN NATICK START BIG SCHOOL ROW

A school row in Natick has divided the town in two camps. Trouble that has been long brooding is accentuated by the probability of civil action against a teacher accused of whipping a boy.

The situation has grown out of punishment administered to Albert O'Neil, an eleven-year-old pupil of Miss Edna R. Mann, a teacher in the sixth grade of the Wilson Grammar School.

According to the story told by young O'Neil and his schoolmates, he was punished by Miss Mann for disobedience during a reading lesson. The punishment, the boy's parents say, was so severe as to confine him to his home ever since.

Miss Mann and her counsel, Judge Henry C. Mulligan, of the Natick Walsh-a Council, maintain silence. Friends of the teacher say the teacher was justified, and, furthermore, that the whipping was not as severe as is represented by the boy's parents and physician.

When an AMERICAN reporter called at the home of young O'Neil he found the mother of the boy seated in the little parlor of her home, No. 4 Pochet Court, having just recently recovered from a bad attack of the grippe.

BOYS HAD GOOD RECORDS.

"I am the mother of seven children," said Mrs. O'Neil, "and every one of them has attended the public schools of Natick. I am proud to say that all of my boys and girls have gone through their school courses with clean records, and Albert, my youngest boy, is not, and never has been until now, in any trouble with his teachers. Miss Mann, the teacher who whipped him, admitted that to me herself when I called at her home on the night my little boy dragged himself home from school. She said after the beating he had received Albert 'ought to know better than to walk home with the boys who had been punished.' My little Albert is not a bad boy, he is only 11 years old, and according to what he and the other little boys in his class tell me the class was having a lesson in reading. Several of the boys were inattentive, and lost the place during the lesson. When it came to Albert's turn to read he also lost the place. For this Miss Mann made him and all the other boys who had lost the place stay after school. It was then that she called Albert to come up to her desk. Albert is always obedient and went to the desk.

"Miss Mann hit him three hard blows on each hand with a heavy rattan, and then pushed back to his seat. He did not cry. Instead, in a boyish way, he tried to grimace. It is said that the boy says Miss Mann called him from his seat again and this time beat him not only on the hands, but on the legs. When he came home there were big welts on the flesh and he was in such pain that for a time that he was barely able to walk home.

"I was obliged to call in Dr. Frank A. Foster, the family doctor. He rubbed the welts and bruises—Albert is a very sensitive boy—he found that the boy's nerves were very bad shape, and advised that I keep him out of school for a few days.

"I don't like to make trouble for Miss Mann, but I think that something should be done to give me some satisfaction. If necessary I shall take the matter to court."

RULES ON WHIPPING.

Edgar L. Ward, superintendent of schools, asked about the affair, said:

"This is a case that we are very sorry to know happened. It is one of those cases where we find that both parties are, to a measure, in the wrong.

"Regarding the accusation that no one but the principal had been made to the superintendent, Mr. Willard said that at the time he was out of town on school business.

"All the teachers in the schools," said Superintendent Willard, "are very careful in their reports of punishment, and this case is no exception.

"Is it not true that the Natick School Committee has established a rule that there shall be no whipping except in the presence of a witness?" was asked Mr. Willard.

"Yes."

"The boy's parents say that in this case this was not done. Is that true?"

"I believe so."

"Do you think that Miss Mann was justified in whipping the O'Neil boy?"

"I don't think that I can answer that question for you."

Miss Mann, who is a daughter of Captain Samuel W. Mann, one of the town's admitted characters—a civil war veteran and commander of the Natick post of the G. A. R.—refused to discuss any feature of the case.

William E. Bigelow, former selectman of Natick and former member of the school board, has been retained as counsel by William O'Neil, the father of the boy.

TWO FACTIONS SPRING UP.

"There is no doubt in my mind," he said, "that the boy received severe treatment, much more than he deserved. He deserved none at all. No doubt the teacher was exasperated at the time, and this exasperation forced her to overstep her bounds perhaps a little too much. I have written to Miss Mann, in the hope that we may be able to arrive at an honorable settlement without resorting to the courts, but in the event that we are unable to arrive at a satisfactory state of affairs, Mrs. O'Neil is determined that she shall have some measure of atonement for the treatment the boy has received."

Out of the tangle of events, two factions are springing up, unknown to Natick. One composed of friends of the O'Neil boy and his parents—neighbors who have children in the Wilson School, and who insist that they do not want to send their children to a school where they will be subjected to such punishment as the O'Neil boy is said to have received—and those on the other side, who favor the teacher.

There have been many rumors that school affairs have not been of the smoothest for some time. It is said there has been more or less friction ever since the last of the high school conducted their football strike three years ago this Fall.

It is known that the principal of one of the schools received many threats by mail a short time ago. Parents of such a serious nature that he applied to the selectmen and obtained a permit to carry a revolver.

ACCUSE NATICK TEACHER OF WHIPPING BOY

EXAMINE ALIENIST ON STOREY WILL

Henry Wise Wood to be examined today in the proceedings which involve the probate of the Storey will of the late Moorfield Storey.

Dr. Charles G. Dewey was examined as an expert alienist. He said that he had seen Mr. Storey on several occasions, have a fair opinion of his mind, that shattered and stubbornness constituted the principal characteristics of Storey's mind, and that he was a man of more than the time. Dr. Dewey said that he had seen an attack, from which Mr. Storey never while he was conscious. He said that he had not examined Storey, but would say that Storey had exercised a state of senile dementia during the last months of his life, although not of permanent. He doubted if Storey would make a present will. Senility and not imbecility is a form of incompetence he said.

Dr. Dewey said that Storey's memory was not that from a waitress and gave her money at times would indicate that he was disintegrating mentally. The process was going on, testified Dr. Dewey.

Storey got drunk on his own admission according to the testimony of Dr. Ernest Bird, of Brookline, Mass., who was called to attend Storey.

Another witness was Dr. Morton Howard, of Pemberton Square, Boston. He testified that in 1912 and part of 1913 Mr. Storey was under the influence of liquor to his walk and talk. He always chewed tobacco, he said, and when he came into the dining room for a meal he would take the tobacco out of his mouth and put it in his fork or spoon.

He also would come to dinner without his glass eye, and when it was brought to him he would put it in upside down. He wore one suit of clothes all the time.

Storey would get his glass eye twisted so that "it looked toward his nose a little," according to the deposition of Daniel Fisher McCarthy, who was on the boat to Plymouth where he met his rival. McCarthy said that several times he had been sent to Storey's room to get his glass eye, which he brought in a glass of water to the dining room, where Storey would insert it in his eye socket.

Mrs. Marion Hussey, another waitress, deposed that Storey always wore a suit of clothes until it was very much soiled before he would buy a new one.

During the testimony of the Rev. Dr. James Sheerin of St. Thomas Episcopal church, South Boston, this minister explained that he was not anxious to have his views supported by people of bad habits.

Shallow with prohibition, and Mr. Kendrick, who is also counsel for the association, went to considerable pains to refute the arguments.

AT once Tommy pictured this Grady as greasy and be-diamonded and hated him. Also, so strong was his imagination, he imagined that he smelt smoke.

At the opposite end of a long dark room Celestia's lovely earnest face seemed to shine like a light. She was speaking very softly and gently, but every word was distinctly audible even to the furthest pair of ears. It seemed to Tommy that the room contained hundreds of girls and hundreds of sewing machines.

As a matter of fact there were almost a hundred of each. Near Celestia stood a dark, sinuous man with a pencil over one ear. "Grady," thought Tommy, and hated him less, for although the man was greasy and did wear something that looked like a diamond in his necktie, there was a kind of reverent expression upon his coarse hard face.

Celestia was just finishing when Tommy entered. She finished, and there was no sound whatever in room. Then one girl left the place and went slowly toward her; others followed, until as many as could be were crowded closely about Celestia and Grady.

They wanted to look at her closely, too, if only for once in their poor, sordid lives. To some it seemed that even to touch her hand would be a happiness to remember always. What had she done to them? They didn't know; but such of them as had been on the verge of despair—and these were not a few—felt hope warming to their hearts. They must toil on for a while yet, and suffer and long for light, for ease, for health, but in time all would be well. She had said so, and they believed her.

As for the man Grady, she had looked into his eyes just once, and he, too, believed. But dark thoughts tormented him. There were upon his conscience—for one had just been born in him—many sins of hardheartedness, brutality and work. In that building there was not one girl whose life he might not have lightened a little if it had pleased him.

It had pleased him to do the reverse. Suddenly he felt moved to take the whole world into his confidence and to promise amends to those whom he had injured.

"Girls," he said, in a loud strong voice. "Just one or two words, please. I don't know what the talk we've been listening to has done to you. But it got me. I charged this—I don't know whether to say Lady or whether to say Angel—a big price for the privilege of speaking to you for ten minutes.

"I want to say, first of all, that it won't cost her a cent. And if she needs money to carry on her good work in this world she can have my pile. But that's not all I've got to say. Be a little patient. Don't crowd her so. If I'm judge of faces she won't go without letting the last least one of you touch her hand.

"Girls, I've been a slave-driver so long that I got hardened to the work. If there was ever any kindness in me it seemed to me I had to stamp it out to get results. I've driven you and driven you till you hate me and fear me, and till you can't call your souls your own. I might have been different and got the work done just the same. But I wasn't.

"Well, I'm going to be. She said things would get better some time. They're better right this minute. Can't you feel the difference? Can't you feel that I'm sorry for the things I've said to you and done to you? I tell you I'm ashamed. I don't know what keeps me from sinking down through the floor. The hardest thing I've got to say comes next. Some of you girls know me for a hard, cold-hearted man. Is there any girl here who can say worse than that of me?"

He paused as if waiting for a reply. Then he went on.

Celestia, her face aglow, talks to the factory workers

"Well there is one girl here who could say worse than that of me, if she would. But she won't. She won't squeal. So I'll have to do the squealing. Molly Bryan! Step forward please, Molly Bryan. I've something to say to you that I want your friends and well-wishers to hear."

Very slowly a slender girl with tragic, haunted, dark eyes came forward.

"Stand alongside of me Molly, and turn so's everybody can see you. Some of you," he went on, "have known Molly a long time. Was there ever a better hearted friend, a cheerfuller worker? Look at poor Molly now! She looks as sad as the East River on a Winter day. It's no news to any of you or I wouldn't go into it.

"But Molly's got no big brother, nor no heavy fisted father to look after her. All she had was herself to look after herself and a heart that trusted everybody. And you know as well as I do, as well as she does, what's come over her eyes, that used to be so bright and smiling, to make them look the way they do. Look here"——

He took a much crumpled paper from his breast pocket.

"Girls," he said, "this here is a license for me and Molly to get married. It's four months old now, but it's a perfectly good license, in perfectly good working order. I folded her with it. That's what I did"——

He turned abruptly to the girl at his side.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. By special arrangement with the Bell Syndicate and Bell Syndicate, Inc., of International News Service.)

BY CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.

"THERE is no need for you to get mixed up in this infernal business," said Crawley. Fighting hard for control of his shattered nerves, "I won't have it. You have been telling me to think of what it will mean to me and doing your best save me, when I can see quite well that it is impossible.

"Now I am going to think of you. What will the world say when they know that Sir Godfrey Brooke—I have congratulated you on the match, with a pitiable little smile—"when they know that great Sir Godfrey Brooke is co-respondent in a divorce case—When they know"——

"Shut up," interrupted Brooke grimly. "Nobody's going to know. You must trust me to see that this is no idiot. I've got to face down below, and, by a stroke of sheer good luck, I've left Spooks—he's my chauffeur, you know—behind. What we've got to do is this. We must see the coast is clear, and risk it. I mean, we must carry her downstairs and put her in the car—do you see? Nobody need know what is the matter, even if they see her."

"Yes, then" gasped Crawley, trembling.

"Well, that remains to be decided. We might run about thirty miles out, and—and leave the body in some secluded spot—Bagshot Heath, for instance, or even nearer. I know lots of places, you see. Oh, my dear fellow, don't look so horrified. We can't allow any idle feelings to have play now. What we've got to do is to dominate, you to deal way with the poor creature's death."

"By the way, I was wondering whether we ought not to carry her down to the river, or better still, the sea. Do you follow me? After all she is dead. I've never liked the idea of the woman since that trouble. I'm no sentimentalist, as you know——"

"It is horrible—abominable," cried Crawley, gasping. Crawley sprang with wild-eyed fear into the great, grim face of the man who was talking about disposing of a corpse as body as if he were discussing an ordinary business complication.

Then, suddenly overwhelming him and making him forget everything else, he realized the stupendous thing he was doing—realized that Brooke was acting in ignorance that any second now might tear away the veil from his eyes and reveal the awful truth, and Brooke would know that Zoe had not loved wife—that she was dead, and that his honor and his life were gone.

He then made an effort to discover exactly what Brooke had been doing—whether there had been any communication with his wife whether he had come straight here from his club or whether he had been to the Savoy, and if so what he had learned. But Brooke seemed to treat his halting questions as being so utterly irrelevant to the ghastly issue in question that he barely took the trouble to answer them.

"Never mind about it," he answered with a frown. "Don't let's bother about her. I'll telephone through to the hotel and so allay any anxiety on her part."

And then he briefly explained exactly what had transpired.

So she had not written to her husband. She had merely gone away with an enigmatic message leaving him to find out the truth as best he could. Crawley breathed afresh.

Here, at any rate, was a great deal of hope—a will-o'-the-wisp to lure him on into the mese of quicksands and marsh lights. Where he felt powerless to raise a finger to save himself, the thought even now it might be possible to save identity from Godfrey Brooke,

"RUTH came next. Why is it—but isn't it so that many times the boy and man—leaving one love—will carry the dream of the one on to the next, and pick the eyes of the second because they are hauntingly like the eyes of the first? You see—remember plainest Ruth's eyes. Dark—wide—velvet eyes—like my mother's. Her mother called her Ruthie. And I—I called her 'Roof!' She was chubby and pink and tiny. Her little lawn dress stuck out before. And the rooster of her little mane of black hair was tied at the top with a pink bow!

"For her I held her doll right side up—most times I tucked a sawdust foot under an arm and her wig swung downward from her made-up face! I admired her hairbow, though I was bitter that she must keep her frock clean. She loved my dog and sat clumsily down to the river, no better still, the sea. Do you follow me? After all she is dead. I've never liked that trouble. I'm no sentimentalist, as you know——

"It is horrible—abominable," cried Crawley, gasping. Crawley sprang with wild-eyed fear into the great, grim face of the man, who was talking about disposing of a corpse as body as if he were discussing an ordinary business complication.

"Then, suddenly overwhelming him, and making him forget everything else, he realized the stupendous thing he was doing—realized that Brooke was acting in ignorance that any second now might tear away the veil from his eyes and reveal the awful truth, and Brooke would know that Zoe had not loved wife—that she was dead, and that his honor and his life were gone.

He then made an effort to discover exactly what Brooke had been doing—whether there had been any communication with his wife whether he had come straight here from his club or whether he had been to the Savoy, and if so what he had learned. But Brooke seemed to treat his halting questions as being so utterly irrelevant to the ghastly issue in question that he barely took the trouble to answer them.

"Never mind about it," he answered with a frown. "Don't let's bother about her. I'll telephone through to the hotel and so allay any anxiety on her part."

And then he briefly explained exactly what had transpired.

So she had not written to her husband. She had merely gone away with an enigmatic message leaving him to find out the truth as best he could. Crawley breathed afresh.

Here, at any rate, was a great deal of hope—a will-o'-the-wisp to lure him on into the mese of quicksands and marsh lights. Where he felt powerless to raise a finger to save himself, the thought even now it might be possible to save

A Sure Way to Remove Coarse, Hairy Growths

Stubborn growths of coarse hair which have been caused by the unwise use of pastes and rub-on preparations can be devitalized with De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover because it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. La Bon Ton says: De Miracle is "the best method in the world today." Only genuine publications of the highest character are quoted by us. Beware of so-called hair removers which are supposedly recommended through bogus quotations from reputable magazines which do not exist.

The Great Riddle Yourself

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"None but yourself shall you meet on the highway of Fate."—Maeterlinck.

AT the root of every act you perform and every thought you entertain lives YOURSELF. Circumstances may warp and twist you now and then, and necessity may compel you to acts that are not in real accord with your nature. But underneath such divergences lives the REAL YOU. No one else can suffer for your sins. No one else can enter into your triumphs. Your weakness and your power are your own. The understanding and sympathy you crave from others won't change YOU.

Suppose tragedy comes to you. Sympathy may help you bear it, but really endurable it becomes only when YOU meet it in your own soul and there fight the battle of conquering sorrow.

Suppose friends prove false. There are other friends to be found in the world. Suppose love fails you. There is still the chance of more lasting love. But when you find yourself—when you pull from your own ideals, nothing else can take the place of the best self to which you have not been true. The only thing to do is to climb back to your REAL SELF.

Failure may curse your every effort. But you can still hope for success. No amount of help from others will give you that success and make it enduring. You have to win it for YOURSELF—and then it is yours.

Life must bring you terrible draughts of sorrow to drink. You may live through searing hours which courage cannot console. But it remains for you to decide what your agony shall bring. It cannot be a destructive force unless YOU let it be.

Your utmost desire makes YOU. The ambition that leads you, guides you to the realization of YOURSELF to decide whether your life shall be a success or a failure—gray and sad or merry and glad—a force for good or one for evil. No one else can enter into your existence and touch the REAL YOU. The responsibility for your life is YOURS. YOU must meet that responsibility and meet it well.

The Peerless Powder in the Perfect Package

The Tetlow Box has a telescoping cover and is fitted with an inner container from which the powder may be poured into the puff-box without spilling. This container also keeps the powder clean and dry and conserves its perfume. The superiority of was positively established in 1876, when the judges of the Centennial Exposition awarded highest honors to the Henry Tetlow preparations, stating "that for purity of material, naturalness of effect and harmlessness to the skin, they are superior to any exhibited by the world." Today, Henry Tetlow's Face Powder is widely used in Europ in preference to French powders. Henry Tetlow's Gossamer is made in White, Flesh, Pink, Cream and Brunette tints.

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the Remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. Sadie Williams, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no opiates or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

In the Pinkham Laboratory are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases it has saved them from surgical operations. Why don't you try it?

Bully at School Soundly Whipped When He Draws Knife Fighting Fair Pays in the Long Run End of School Days and Looking for a Job.

I DON'T suppose there was ever a champion whose boyhood had as little fighting in it as mine.

In the first place, I was never a quarrelsome boy, and then I grew up so quick that I was always bigger and stronger than the boys I played with.

My first fight was in the grove back of the little country schoolhouse.

I was about twelve years old, and the boy I fought with was sixteen, at least yet we were pretty evenly matched at that.

A lot of us youngsters were playing leap frog and I was just getting limbered up, when this other boy came up and knocked it down.

How I hated that kind of fellow! He is always around to pick on some one who is smaller than himself.

I stood up to him, and told him to go away and let us have our game, and he slapped my cap over my eyes. I stooped to pick it up, he jerked it from me and—

Well, we went at it.

I had never seen a fellow in my life, but I had watched a lot with the Indian boys. I knew what to do, and when we began hitting we were pretty even for a little while.

I didn't know enough to strike straight out, so I batted him like a windmill.

Then—he hit me. I take that back. He struck me hard. He drove his head forward, like a battering ram, and struck me square on the nose.

He broke away from me then, and drew a knife on me. It was only a Barlow, but it had a blade that looked as big as a bay horse. It made me feel as though—

There was a boy, four years older than me and afraid to fight fair! He came at me with a rush, and all the other boys started on a run to the schoolhouse, yelling for the teacher.

I had the sense to wait until he started his arm with the knife, and then I gave a flying leap backward.

The force of the blow swung him around, and in a flash I had him by the wrists.

Series "F" Starts Today

Race for Tours Nearing End

With the publication today of the first coupon in Series "F," the second last period of the contest begins. There is no time to waste now in piling up your vote totals if you want to be among the twenty-five leading candidates when the last vote is polled on July 3.

NOW TODAY is the time when the work of gathering votes will count, and those who realize this will be the ones to take the lead in the contest and hold it. The success of this newspaper depends upon the success of its workers, so, of course, you may make a good showing for this series now beginning.

In a little over three weeks more the big tour will have been run. Don't stop NOW to wonder whether you will be one of the fortunate ones who will start on July 24 for the Far West. Determine all your spare time to accomplishing the greatest possible number of vote coupons.

Every candidate seems to be working hard to get ahead in the leading twenty. There is not much more to say to candidates, except that a persevering campaign of vote-gathering must be pursued every day in every day of the next twenty-five days. In case we expect to win, or even the second tour.

A complete standing will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN, and will contain all votes polled in Series "A," "B," "C," "D," "E" and "F." Series "D" standing will appear in the Sunday AMERICAN, June 29.

NEWS WRITTEN BY LEADING EXPERTS

WHITE DOUBTFUL IN LONG BATTLES

By JACK CONWAY.

CHARLES WHITE cannot be beaten by any lightweight in the world. This statement has been made by hundreds of local fans who have witnessed the Chicago ring star in action at the Atlas A. A. After watching White knock out Eddie Murphy, Fred Yelle and Charley Thomas, we are forced to admit that he is a whale of a fighter. He is the hardest-hitting lightweight performing in the ring today but we cannot agree with those persons who assert that White cannot be beaten.

There are a number of boxers who have beaten White and one of them might be able to accomplish the task again. Freddy Welsh, Jack Britton, Jimmy Duffy and "Young" Shugrue have all scored victories over White. Johnny Dundee, Johnny Griffiths, Willie Ritchie, Gilbert Gallant, Matty Baldwin and several other lightweights are not afraid of White and would be able to give him a merry battle.

It cannot, therefore, be said that there is not a lightweight in the world who possesses enough class to dispose of White. Charley has made a big hit by his great fighting in this city but he was not opposed by Welsh or a Duffy in any of his tussles at the Atlas Club. He was pitted against second-raters and a high class performer will usually show to advantage when boxing a person who lacks the finish that makes a star performer.

THERE are many persons who believe that White would be able to dispose of Welsh in a twenty-round bout. They assert that the champion would tire after ten rounds and that the Chicago puncher would be able to score with one of his famous dream smashes. Welsh has proved his worth in twenty-round bouts on numerous occasions, while, on the other hand, has yet to win from a first class boxer in a contest which went more than fifteen sessions. He knocked out Stanley Yoakum in fourteen frames while he attended to Jim Flynn in eighteen rounds. Neither of these men, however, was classed as world beaters.

White was beaten in twenty rounds by Danny Webster, a second-rater, back in 1911, while Bobby Wagner, another second class fighter, held him to a fifteen-round draw the same year.

Jack Britton forced White to quit in eighteen rounds on July 4, 1913. The weight for that match was 133 pounds several hours before the match. Those present at the ringside said that White fought a welterweight.

WHEN Welsh fought White in Milwaukee he made Nate Lewis' champion footling. Chocolate did not land a single hard left hook on the Welshman was too fast and skilful for the lefty, of course, there is a question whether Welsh would be able to show to well against White in a contest over the Marathon route.

We are not making these statements in the interest of giving credit away from White. He is a wonderful fighter and is liable to knock out any boxer in the world. White, however, is not unbeatable and would not have things so much his own way if opposed by one of the real big men of the lightweight division.

MIKE GLOVER, South Boston's clever welterweight, has been secured to help prepare Gilbert Gallant for his twelve-round bout with Al Wolgast, which will take place at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. By training with Gallant, Glover will get so get himself into shape for his encounter with Jack Britton, which will be held at the Arena on June 12. Gallant and Wolgast should put up a dashing battle. Both are rugged, two-handed fighters and delight in exchanging blows at close quarters. The Gallant-Wolgast bout will be the best match that has been held in Boston this season. It looks as though Joe Gallant-Wolgast bouts would go it one better.

IT will be Wolgast's first appearance in a Hub ring since he fought Matty Baldwin at the Atlas A. A. on September 7, 1909. That was before Wolgast won the lightweight championship by defeating Battling Nelson after forty rounds of furious fighting at Point Richmond on February 22, 1910. Wolgast's bout with Ehlstadt was declared a draw much to the surprise of the "fans" as the Cadillac "Wildcat" battered the Charlestown favorite around the ring for the greater part of the contest.

DALY TO COACH CADETS AGAIN

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 10.—It was announced here that Lieutenant Charles D. Daly, who has acted as head coach for the Army football team for the last three years, will serve in that capacity the coming fall.

Lieutenant Daly was graduated from Harvard in 1901 and from West Point in 1905. He is now stationed with his troop, the Third Battery of Field Artillery, at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Lieutenant Daly will report at the opening of the football season.

Joe Brickley to Go to Exeter Academy

Joe Brickley, captain of the Everett High school baseball team, will enter Exeter Academy next Fall to remain there a year as a preparation for college. Joe is still undecided as to whether he will follow in the footsteps of his brother and select Harvard for his Alma Mater or decide on some other college.

Charley Brickley will take Joe with him when he leaves for the Blue Ridge cabin, Charlottesville, Va., which will be late this month. Brickley will act as councilor at the vacation school again and teach harmony and English. He probably will do little football work because he is already trained pretty finely for playing and the Everett boy's Virginian climate knocked off his weight a great deal too fast last year.

Brickley will report at John Hopkins, where he is to serve his first coachship, on September 25. His plans are altogether hazy but he may bring down another Harvard man to help him with the linemen.

Bowlers to Show at East Boston Event

A novel entertainment will be given tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Waterfall Club, which is composed of young women of St. Joseph's parish, East Boston, at the East Boston Catholic Literary Club House, dancing and bowling among the features, and interest in a big match on the latter brought out Nobile Island. Several prominent bowlers will appear during the evening and the indoors lots full of promise.

Leominster to Have Monster Track Meet

LEOMINSTER, June 10.—A six-mile marathon, 100-yard dash, shot put, 120-yard low hurdles and a high jump will comprise the list of sports to be conducted in connection with the 175th anniversary celebration to be held here, July 5. These events will be conducted under the Amateur Athletic Union rules and are open to all. Valuable prizes will be given the winners in each event. Entry blanks and information can be secured from Secretary Guy A. Savage, Leominster.

Penn Crews Arrive at Poughkeepsie

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 10.—Coach Vivian Nickalls had his three Pennsylvania crews on the Hudson, the Pennsylvania oarsmen having augmented the rowing colony gathering for the intercollegiate regatta.

Coach Rice of Columbia also had his three crews on the river for an eight-mile run.

The Syracuse crews will arrive here this afternoon.

Fresh Favors for Fans

By H. W. LANIGAN

H. B. Johnson's two rechercho Western clubs, Detroit's Tigers and Chicago's Hose, are gallavanting through the East at too gruelling a gait to suit the baseball-going populace of this section. Practically daily they are adding to their load up at the top and what's jarring most fiendishly is the utter inability of the Red Sox's three pictorial members to bombard the wicked enemy. The Tigers grabbed four out of five from the shipping Yanks before coming to town. The White Sox's first out in Gay Gotham would indicate that red much ill fortune will confront them there. Washington was fairly troublesome all the way in 1914, eventually landing third, a bone ahead of Detroit, but on paper the clan of Griff looks equally as vulnerable as a year ago. But the Nationals have not been showing one tota of class, while C. Mack is experimenting this season, you know.

The Red Sox raced once and from their three fellow co-habiters to this section. That's a settlement pipe. The Yanks were off to a good start, but barring the New York push behind figures them to be very troublesome the rest of the way. The Nationals loom up on the right party to come to the Red Sox's aid. Shaw and Ayres are good hurlers, and then Walter Johnson still lives. Likewise may Joe Boehling go right. Locally the fans are very anxious to see the Nationals climb up on their toes and get started.

The mud massacre, the White-Thomas fans at Fenway Tuesday night didn't deter Boston and English. The event probably will do little football work because he is already trained pretty finely for playing and the Everett boy's Virginian climate knocked off his weight a great deal too fast last year.

Brickley will report at John Hopkins, where he is to serve his first coachship, on September 25. His plans are altogether hazy but he may bring down another Harvard man to help him with the linemen.

The Big Noise in the New York slaughter was our own Eddie Cicotte of former Kalamazoo, Colonel Rowland Hazard permitted the poly-poly slightest to start a game. Eddie, in his appreciation by yielding only two stingy hits and applying the brush. Texas Matty Mahaffey of this vicinity, who got the big boner from the Hose. Joseph Cantrell went up against the pipfest were blanked with just as great a frequency as the home-spread slipped Vaughnville by, 3 to 0.

Another mud battle staged on Robinson Field out in St. Louis. The Giants opened there for the season and at the end of their bit of the fifth sail were showing the way by two lengths. One "Poll" Perritt was enjoying it all immensely. Twas fine and dandy to see his former playmates going like a bunch of nutts, and he, Poll himself, the big noise in the drama. But a baseball game is never over until the last man is retired, save when a storm blows up, and the seventh round was still in the future so we don't got thoroughly hep to the fact that the Cards are game, if nothing else.

The Giants registered six runs in No. 5. The Cards tallied seven in No. 7. This raised them from five to the bad to two to the good. The exact storyette of the Cards' goings in the exciting seventh follows: Wilson started by expiring. Doyle to Merkle. Dolan singled. So did "Kid" Hyatt. Brainard bested Betzel's bounder and Dolan scored. A Turk named Gonzales was oozed into the matinee by Huggins and he bingled, scoring Hyatt. Exit Perritt; enter Stroud. Roche went up for the pitcher and drew a pass. Squeed Souse. Butler boosted to Burns and Betzel tallied.

Next "Blonde Rob" Rescher, whose main weakness for Jawn McGraw last Summer was his failure to do anything else but whiff in the pinchest-hole" is likewise the lad who went West in exchange for Perritt, after Jawn J. rescued "Poll" from the frivolous Feds—slammed out a loud double and Gonzalez socked over. "Dots" Miller kept up the fireworks by punching a triple over Robertson's noodle and Rooke and Bescher held home with the run that settled the show.

"Larry" Doyle is going better since he got that big bone out of the system and Fenway Park. The Braves boy lately massacred the ball in Chicago, and started in St. Louis with a double, a triple and a homer.

The day's one real classic, notable feature was staged at the Cubs' park when Joe Mowad played the role of smart guy making big things of the Phils' pilot. That was sending one Grover Alexander to the firing line, and Joe's mates did not disappoint. Helms also batted out a double with the head man on first. But Alex blew up to a big enough extent in the eighth and ninth to permit the Cubs to bust the tails at 3 all.

Rogie Bescher, the game's most sensitive ball player, if not its best, up to date, is now batting as behind Alex. Heals started the rally to the winning tally in No. 2 by pounding out a long one-bagger. Then, taking third on Cravath's stiff one-spot and counting when Nicholson dropped a Texas Leaguer to left field. Bescher scored two of the three runs and also on over the other two. Beddus hit single, he emitted out a double, and a triple.

The Cubs made a game effort to pull the game out of the fire in their half of the eleventh. There, with Paskert singled and third, with the corpses encumbering only one when Roger Bresnahan lined like a shot to Niehoff, who engineered a two-ply killing.

"Big Jeff" Pfeffer pitched for Brooklyn. Brooklyn played to Cincinnati. So, of course, Pfeffer's game. Wise athletes running Ebbets' field, by the way, attendance was practically all tarring J. Ryder and P. Babcroft.

Southpaw Willie Mitchell was a great game for Lee Fohl at Philly. The score was 0 to 0 up to No. 6 when Strunk's double and Bain's single gave the Athletics a run. Mitchell was then out to No. 3. Chapman walked and swiped second, and Miller-Wood-Jacobs circuit was started. Chapman and "Mickey" performed together. The former, big Hines Smith, one of Watertown's 1914 heroes, singled and Mickey walked, but struck out on Grauer. Wambsganss came to bat with a timely two-bagger and both came over with the big winning run.

Lajoie doubled and Matoon walked with two dead to No. 8. The Red Sox looked for Speaker for Boston and whiffed.

The scientific pepper beginning with H. Jennings on the receiving lines out at Fenway Park at Detroit Burke. He was a heavy-hitting third baseman in his day, if never as graceful as Jennings on the defense.

PLENTY OF WHEAT FOR ALL NATIONS

Recession in the price of a barrel of flour during the last week from $12.50 to $9 has aroused the interest of housekeepers and bakers who are now hoping that the price will go one lower. Instead of $12 and $9 a barrel, as was predicted some months ago, the hope is expressed that we are to have normal markets after all.

In this connection W. S. Reid, one of the largest importers of flour in New England, gives a comprehensive review of the world's wheat and flour market as seen by one who must consider every factor.

He calls attention to the government report just issued, which places the wheat yield for the United States this year at 891,000,000 bushels, or 179,000,000 in excess of last year.

He points to the bigness of attention to the wheat crops in India, Russia and Argentina, which are also showing enormous significance.

To this mind the producer was responsible for the top-notch prices to which flour recently soared. He says that housekeepers are laying in stocks in excess of their immediate needs, and that this tendency, helped by speculators, boosted the price. In consequence, he says the consumer today has a surplus and is not buying as usual. Added to this, he says, is the fact that less flour is being used per capita the world over than it was before the war was declared.

"Among other factors affecting the flour market," says Mr. Reid, "is the great wheat crop from India now on its way to England. It is being called for practically no more wheat and flour from the United States, and American wheat cannot be available. That which is going out from this country is what was translated for some time ago, and new orders are coming in at the present.

"Russia, which raised a third more wheat last year than it could consume, has its storehouses filled with a surplus, waiting for the time when to open her markets to the world. Before the war is over this opening is sure to come, and after that the real question is settled for the allies. The markets of the world know that Russian surplus awaits only its existence. Sooner or later this tremendous food supply will find its way to Italy, Switzerland, France, Spain, England, Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

"England will buy this wheat in preference to that from America, for her securities are involved, and she will naturally purchase where she has placed her loans.

"Another important factor is the wheat crop in Argentina. That country needs money and will sell its wheat.

"Canadian wheat will go upon the market promptly with the release of the tremendous financial burden laid on it by the war.

"My advice to the consumer is to buy flour as it is needed from day to day, and let the future take care of itself."

Bad Temper Is Cause of Suit for Divorce

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Excessive temper, but no mention of temperament, is charged in a divorce complaint filed secretly by Mrs. Ethel Ansell Woolworth Salz, against Henri Edward Salz, well known organist.

Mrs. Salz, in her libelle, tells the people of consequence, not only with herself but with everybody else, was her alleged husband's failing. She says, he slapped her and once he knocked her across the bed. The latter incident is said to have occurred on the day of their separation.

Says Carranza Had Bought Ship Perry

Alonso W. Perry, president of the Canadian Atlantic and Plant Steamship Company, says that the company's steamer, A. J. Hemphill, struck on the ledges off Sambo Head, near Halifax, N. S., Tuesday, was on her last trip before the vessel was sold to representatives of the Constitutional party of Mexico. He says Carranza was to pay $6,000 for the vessel.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were higher at the opening today, with trading more active than it was yesterday. Prices were irregular in the early dealings, however, and it was not until after the first hour that the market showed any real strength. Then a general movement to higher levels developed, with gains ranging from fractions to 2 points. Bethlehem Steel B, which sold down to $412 a share yesterday, was bid up to $420 at the opening, and Crucible Steel, which yesterday dropped 3 points, was in demand at the moment of Tuesday's quotation. Reports of a further advance in the price of steel products to meet increased costs of production, and of the placing of additional orders for steel rails, were responsible for the buying movement. Bears, however, continued to sell the market, and the buying was not in large volume. Trading was professional in character, and the public showed little interest in the proceedings. Bonds were steady.

Sentiment in the stock market was influenced by the announcement of the first real extension of the European war loan, which expires on the 15th inst. Subscriptions to the loan, which was floated by the Anglo-French commission, totaled $1,000,000,000, and the extension is for $500,000,000. The new loan will be issued in the form of 5 per cent. bonds, and will be secured by a deposit of collateral, consisting largely of American securities. The extension is regarded as a bullish factor in the stock market, as it is believed that the allies will use the proceeds of the loan to make purchases in this country.

Additional strength was imparted to the stock market by the announcement of the formation of a pool to handle the stock of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The pool is said to have been formed by Charles M. Schwab, president of the corporation, and a number of his associates. It is reported that the pool has acquired a large block of the stock, and that it will be used to support the market for the shares.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $1,750,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

Total sales of stocks today were 1,100,000 shares, against 1,000,000 shares yesterday.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Mr. Bryan's Resignation Echoes Sound American Sentiments.

This Nation Wants No War; Need Have No War with Germany or Any Nation.

We Should Do No Blustering, Make No Threats of War, Take No Steps That Might Lead to War, Bloody, Brutal and Inexcusable.

Mr. Bryan has resigned his office, the highest but one in this country, because he holds principle above place. The people will applaud; those that see only selfishness in a public act are saying already that Mr. Bryan saw an opportunity to cut away from Mr. Wilson and compete with him for the nomination next year without apparent ingratitude, and that the acceptance of his resignation will insure him the support of a great number of German-American citizens.

But those who know Mr. Bryan know that in this case he acted without thought of political or personal end.

During the last few years he has devoted himself in public utterances, private conversations, in his writings, his dealings with foreign nations, in all conceivable ways to the cause of peace.

He knows, as the great bulk of the American people know, that the first duty of this nation is to maintain peace, to be guilty of no act or word that might disturb the situation, or cause unnecessary offence to the overwrought and desperately driven nations of Europe.

The terms of the communication which this government has sent to the German Empire are such as have shocked Mr. Bryan's conscience and his sense of right.

He refuses properly to remain the public servant, bound by his office to transmit a message that his conscience does not approve.

There exists no CAUSE for war between Germany and the United States, as the Hearst newspapers have pointed out from the beginning.

There is no possible excuse for the taking by this country of such an attitude as would indicate desire for war. Germany has not intentionally warred upon us. She does not want war with us, and we do not want war with her.

Germany is at war with England, and has been sinking English ships. It is our right and duty to demand such assurances of our security as may be given for American lives. But it is most distinctly our duty, as Mr. Bryan's resignation points out, not to assume a warlike, threatening attitude, because of the most unfortunate deaths of a number of American citizens travelling upon a British ship that was practically a war ship held in reserve, and beyond question a swift messenger carrying thousands of boxes of ammunition intended to destroy Germans.

This country wants no war and will have no war. The German race is fighting now against four of the greatest powers of Europe—England, France, Russia and Italy. It is not the desire of any fair-minded American that this country should be the fifth to unite in the attack upon the Germans, so long as the German government does not deliberately attack us.

Mr. Bryan has given up his high office, a conspicuous position of honor and responsibility, upon which the eyes of the world were fastened. He withdraws from public life, forfeits the reward of a long career of public activity, a place that no man could have prized more highly than he, but conscience and his common sense tell him that this country must remain at peace, and that as there is no excuse for any talk or threat of war, there is no excuse for any message that might possibly lead to war.

The people will honor Mr. Bryan in his retirement, in this supreme act of protest, more than they have honored him at any other time in his life.

The finest characteristic of a public man is the power to resist the temptation to brag, to bluster, to court public favor; lightly to follow the thoughtless in a violent mood.

Mr. Bryan knows that the great duty of this nation today is to remain at peace with the whole world, ready, when the time comes, to help and to restore normal conditions to the globe.

No disgrace could be greater, no calamity more horrible, than for this nation to add its power, wealth and intelligence to the terrible task of wholesale murder. Honor to the man who has given up place and public honor as a protest against what he believes to be an unwise and unjustified attitude by the government at Washington.

ROLLO'S RAMBLES!

"What is all that uproar about, Uncle Sam?"

"It is a lot of railroad travelers, Rollo, endeavoring to comply with the new and intelligent law secured by Senator Cummins of Iowa, requiring passengers to—er—er—you'll have to read the notice on the wall, Rollo, I really can't explain it. Did you ever observe, Rollo, that when an American law-maker has a little spare time he generally spends it getting some useless and objectionable law passed that puts his fellow citizens to annoyance, discomfort and expense? Then he goes home and asks his bonehead constituents to re-elect him for another term"

Some Great Mysteries of Thought

By Garrett P. Serviss

THERE may be the vision of a true prophet in Dr. Alexander Graham Bell's suggestion to the members of the Electrical Engineers' Society of the possibility of developing new human senses with the aid of vibrations more or less analogous to those employed in wireless telegraphy.

He remarks, what I have several times pointed out in these articles, that our knowledge of things around us is based entirely on the perception of vibrations, and that only a very small part of the total sum of vibrations passing through the air, the earth, and the ether is utilized by our senses of sight, hearing, touch, taste and smell.

There are immense spaces in the gamut of vibrations which appear like empty gaps to us, but which we know are, nevertheless, completely filled. The vibrations that we perceive bring us certain kinds of knowledge, but those which exist without our perceiving them would give us other kinds of knowledge if we had senses capable of responding to them.

The telephone, wireless telegraphy, and X-rays show that it is possible for human ingenuity to devise mechanical methods of utilizing some of the vibrations which ordinarily escape our senses. With their aid we do things which, measured by the natural limitations of sense, are truly miraculous.

We make our voices audible at distances of hundreds of miles, by first transforming the waves of sound into electrical vibrations and then turning them back again into sound waves. We talk across the oceans, and, perhaps, will some time send our voices all around the world and have them return to our own ears by the aid of apparatus which wings sound with the speed and range of light, and then catches it in the midst of its magic flight, and lo! at a touch of the wand, it is sound again! We look straight through solid, opaque bodies with the help of rays that pass freely where light rays are stopped.

Not one of these marvels of modern science has any other basis than the utilization of vibrations which ordinarily pass our physical senses unperceived.

There is, then, not the slightest extravagance in Dr. Bell's suggestion that we might, theoretically, have some kind of vibratory apparatus attached to the head which would enable us to interchange thought without the aid of speech or visible signs. The physical basis of thought itself is cerebral vibration, or vibration in the brain. If telepathy is a real phenomenon, it can rest upon nothing except vibrations proceeding from one brain and received by another.

When our brains are in activity they are little dynamos, or rather little suns, radiating vibratory energy all about them. Just as, with our fragmentary five senses, we can perceive but a small fraction of the radiations sent forth from the sun and the stars, so, with the same limited equipment of senses, we perceive but a very small part of the activity of the human brain.

Our physical organization is so imperfect that a man has great difficulty in following and comprehending his own thoughts. Every thinker feels that his brain receives thought from some source which he can neither trace nor control. He also feels that there are regions of knowledge which he could traverse if only he had finer and higher powers of thought.

He knows that those powers exist, but they are like vibrations for whose perception he lacks the needed senses. He encounters dead, blank walls, solid and opaque, through which his mental vision cannot range, but which he feels that he might easily penetrate if only some cerebral equivalent of the X-ray could be brought to his aid.

But the communication of thought from one brain to another is yet more difficult with our present organization. It is effected entirely by indirect and very imperfect means. Language, to use a simile of Matthew Arnold's, is only something "thrown out at thought," with the hope of hitting it and bringing it down into the field of comprehension. How many hard hours do we spend in making our fellows understand what we mean. And then, too often, we fail.

Thought is invisible and intangible, and yet we can only communicate it through the eyes, the ears, the touch! Mind surely can never fully comprehend mind until the barriers are more completely removed, so that communication may become direct. Some of the consequences which would result from the possession of such a means of transmitting thought as Dr. Bell has suggested may be found worked out in a story of mine, "A Columbus of Space," written many years ago. These things are not mere dreams. In their nature they are no more fantastical than X-ray photography or wireless telephony.

The Cost of a Wreck-Strewn World

By John K. Winkler

ON August 1 next the value of the world's capital will have been reduced by SIXTY BILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

This is one year's cost of a wreck-strewn world, in the opinion of Professor Simon Nelson Patten, the University of Pennsylvania's noted economist. Dr. Patten bases his opinion upon the economic axiom that a reduction in product produces a double effect in value.

Dr. Patten was one of the eminent thinkers gathered in Philadelphia recently to discuss before the American Academy of Political and Social Science the effects of the European war.

"It is modest to say that a ten per cent. reduction in produce will produce twenty per cent. in reduction in value," asserted the collegian. "The cost of the war for one year is about $15,000,000,000. If we take into consideration the losses of private property in Belgium, Poland, and other places actually within the war area, together with the disturbances of industry in other regions, a like destruction of $15,000,000,000 has occurred.

"Thus we have an actual destruction of property to the extent of $30,000,000,000, and if the loss in value is double the loss in product, we can assume that at the end of the year the value of the world's capital has been reduced by $60,000,000,000. As the total wealth of the countries involved foots up to something like $300,000,000,000, the loss is about twenty per cent.

"If the war continues more than a year these losses will be enormously increased and the difficulties of readjustment correspondingly great. I do not, however, from this infer that the total value of the world's wealth will be permanently decreased. No matter how destructive the war is, none of the permanent resources of the world will be disturbed, and sooner or later the liquidation of these losses will take place, and the re-creation of values will take place, giving a higher total value than before.

"Such, at least, has been the result that has followed all the financial crises of the past and it is likely to be true again. But all securities, no matter how safe, will be affected by the industrial reorganization that follows the closing of the war."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox SAYS

Wealthy Are Too Often Thoughtless of the Poor

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

THE gulf between people of wealth and the world's toilers can never be bridged until some method is found to awaken the brains and hearts of the wealthy class to a better understanding of those who work for a living.

The most indifferent, inconsiderate, thoughtless and careless people on earth when it comes to the paying of bills and the liquidating of debts which are justly due are the people who possess fortunes and large incomes. The poor and the modestly comfortable classes are far more keenly alive to their obligations in these matters, and they pay their debts with much greater promptness than do people of wealth.

Ask any of the music teachers, teachers of languages, dressmakers, tailors, merchants and tradesmen in the land, and they will corroborate these statements.

A young woman music teacher said recently: "My patrons are almost all people of wealth. They employ me for their daughters, wives and sisters, and make no protest at my prices. Yet when I present my bill at the end of a term the greater number of my patrons compel me to wait six, eight and even twelve months for a settlement.

"This is in order that their money may continue to draw interest during that period of time. Meantime I am obliged to keep continually in debt, and when their money is received it goes to pay for what one generally terms 'dead horses.'

"The few people of modest means who employ me are far more thoughtful and considerate."

There seems to be something in the possession of great wealth which creates a hardening of the heart and a binding of the spiritual vision toward others less fortunately situated.

A French teacher, popular among the ultra-fashionable circles of New York city, a few years ago was obliged to give up his rooms because his patrons went to Europe for the Summer owing him money. He had relied upon it to pay his rent in advance. Innumerable cases could be cited. It is not the exceptional situation; the exceptional case is that of the wealthy man or woman who promptly pays a debt.

This condition excites animosity in the minds of the world's toilers and does much to increase unrest. It would be an excellent idea if all teachers, merchants and tradesmen could combine in a union and respectfully demand better treatment and more prompt payments in their dealings with the rich.
